

Memphis Under Guard Following a Fiery Night

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) —(dashing forth to set fires and Troop-protected firetrucks and stone firetrucks.

At midnight, a fire department spokesman said 148 fire alarms had been turned in from the downtown area. Later in the morning, a two-alarm blaze was reported at a feed mill, the second blaze there during the night.

National Guardsmen, riding on the firetrucks, prevented serious interference, however, and firefighters had most of the blazes out in short order.

Five Shots at Police

A more serious threat was a sniping incident when five shots were fired at police officers stationed at the intersection of Beale Street and Hernando Avenue, the day's main trouble spot.

Policemen put on bulletproof vests, and National Guardsmen with sniper scopes moved into the areas. Police elected not to press the search for the sniper, and no further shots were reported.

Thursday's march began as a peaceful demonstration, and both its leaders and police authorities said the violence was the work of a splinter group of Negro youths.

200 Youths on Binge

Frank Holloman, Memphis police director, said the trouble started when 200 youths separated from the main group and went on a window breaking and looting binge. Police retaliated with clubs and riot gas.

In the struggle that followed and continued through the night, a 16-year-old Negro, Larry Payne, was shot to death, more than 150 arrests were made, and at least 50 persons were injured—including five shot and one stabbed.

Police said Payne was shot and killed sometime after the march was broken up. Holloman said he was told Payne was shot after charging an officer with a butcher knife when the youth was caught looting.

The stabbing victim was an unidentified city bus driver, leading the Memphis transit authority to halt all bus service.

Acting under a state law rushed through the legislature during the day, Mayor Henry Loeb imposed a curfew from 7 p.m. until 5 a.m. Police allowed only persons going to and from work to be on the streets, under threat of arrest.

Gov. Buford Ellington ordered in 4,000 riot-trained National Guardsmen and put another 8,000 on alert.

The march broke apart less than half an hour after it started as Negro youths throwing clubs and rocks smashed windows in downtown stores and began grabbing out the merchandise on display. Police said five persons were shot when caught looting.

Blames Youngsters

King, assisted by his aides, pushed his way through the milling, shouting mob and was driven away in a car as soon as the violence erupted. In a news conference later he blamed the trouble on youngsters on the sidelines and not a part of the march itself.

Later, King canceled a series of meetings in Washington today and said he would stay to deal with the situation here.

Memphis Under Guard Following a Fiery Night

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — darting forth to set fires and stone firetrucks, and stringent police patrols kept guard on Memphis today, but fires flickered sporadically in the wreckage left by a riot which claimed one life.

The violence began on historic Beale Street Thursday morning when a march by 6,000 Negroes led by Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. in support of striking garbage collectors turned into a riot and continued through the day and night despite a tightly enforced curfew.

Another One Possible
Another possible confrontation between marchers and police was expected today with Negro leaders saying they would stage another march—this one limited to sidewalks like those held at most daily since the city's sanitation workers struck Feb. 12.

A $6 Million Question: Hanoi Claims the F111A

By GEORGE ESPER

SAIGON (AP) — North Vietnam claimed today that its armed forces had shot down an F111A, the controversial new U.S. airplane which tasted combat for the first time this week. U.S. authorities had reported earlier one of the $6 million planes was overdue after a mission.

The North Vietnamese claim, heard in a Hanoi broadcast monitored in Tokyo, said the supersonic swing-wing aircraft had been "shattered down" Thursday over Ha Tinh Province about 100 miles northwest of the demilitarized zone near the Laos border.

The broadcast made no mention of the fate of the two-man crew.

No Confirmation, Denial

Asked about the Hanoi claim, a U.S. spokesman said: "I can't comment on it. I can't confirm or deny it. As far as I'm concerned, a plane is overdue."

One senior U.S. military official did not rule out the possibility when asked before the Hanoi announcement whether the plane might have been shot down.

"We have no evidence of that at all," he said. "It's a new aircraft. We have no way of knowing yet."

Six of the F111s, capable of speeds of more than twice the speed of sound with bomb loads greater than any other U.S. plane except the B52 Stratofortress, arrived at Ta Khli air base in Thailand March 17 and a flight of them, presumably four, made their first combat missions Monday.

Their mission Thursday, aimed at truck parks and storage areas 24 to 29 miles northwest of Dong Hoi in the North Vietnam's southern panhandle, was the fourth since they arrived in the combat zone.

Some Ground Fire

The U.S. spokesman said he had no reports of any enemy action against the F111s in the raids near Dong Hoi Thursday night. He said no MIG interceptors engaged them and they did not draw surface-to-air missiles or antiaircraft fire.

The day before, he said, North Vietnamese ground troops fired on a flight of F111s but did no damage.

If the loss of the F111 is confirmed, it will be the 815th U.S. warplane downed in more than three years of bombing of North Vietnam.

There was no indication the planes would be grounded because of the loss of one. One source said he was almost certain the F111s were back in action over North Vietnam today.

although operational reports had not yet reached Saigon.

The Lubbock, Tex., Advance Journal reported that the Pentagon had notified the parents of Capt. Dennis L. Graham, 26, Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Graham, that he was one of the two crewmen aboard the missing plane.

Word of the loss of the plane came out in a terse announcement from the headquarters of Gen. William C. Westmoreland: "An F111A has been declared overdue on a mission. For security reasons, no other details will be made available at this time."

Since their arrival the F111s have been assigned secondary targets in the southern panhandle rather than in the heartland where the enemy's defenses are much tougher.

Pilots are likely to face less antiaircraft fire, surface-to-air missiles and MIG interceptors in the panhandle. The idea was to break the F111s in gradually on the lesser targets.

Copter Downed

Elsewhere, North Vietnamese gunners shot down another U.S. helicopter at Khe Sanh. A Marine CH46 Sea Knight was downed by enemy automatic weapons fire a mile southeast of Hill 881, one of the strongpoints that flanks the main combat base.

The crew, believed to be four men, was rescued. There were no passengers reported aboard the helicopter. The helicopter was reported heavily damaged.

Enemy gunners pumped fewer than 200 rounds of artillery, mortars and rockets into the Khe Sanh combat base Thursday. U.S. casualties were said to be light.

Mideast War Peril: Israeli Jets Attack

TEL AVIV (AP) — Israeli planes roared across the Jordan River today and swooped low to plaster Jordanian artillery and machinegun emplacements along a four-mile front.

Newsmen in the tense Beisan Valley in Jordan reported that the jet fighters penetrated several miles into Jordan to the Gilead Mountains.

An Israeli army spokesman charged that the Jordanians began firing machine guns at Israeli settlements at 11:30 a.m. Israeli troops fired back, he said, and the Jordanians wheeled up artillery to bombard the settlements of Gesher, Beit Yosef and Yardenia. The Israelis replied with their own artillery.

Fighting halted around noon but erupted again one half hour later. At this point Israeli planes were dispatched to silence the Jordanian guns, the spokesman said. He added there were no Israeli casualties.

Tension had filled the valley earlier in the day after four Israeli civilians were killed when their trailer, pulled by a tractor, hit a mine in a banana grove in Massada, south of Lake Galilee. A fifth passenger, an American, was badly wounded, a spokesman said.

To the Arabs it looked like war was impending again.

Before news of the air strike, press reports in Cairo, Beirut, Damascus, Amman and Baghdad had chorused the general feeling that Israel was about to hit Jordan again, and soon.

Israeli troop buildups were reported under way in the northern part of the Jordan valley, and inhabitants on the Jordanian side of the river were reported to be evacuating their homes for safe ground.

The press also spoke of Israeli buildups along the cease-fire line with Syria, in the Sinai desert and even along the quiet border with Lebanon.

Reports from Amman said King Hussein held a lengthy meeting at army general headquarters Thursday. In Beirut, President Charles Helou and Premier Abdullah Yafi discussed the situation with Arab League Secretary-General Abdel Khalek Hassouna.

Iraqi President Abdel Rahman Aref warned the Arabs that time was not on their side, and 25. The group admitted one of its officers and one other raider were killed in the operation. The crisis lay in the hands of the Arabs. By that he meant another war.

The incidents today came eight days after Israeli forces slashed into Jordan, destroyed three guerrilla bases and killed 170 Arab commandos.

Earlier today an Israeli army spokesman said machine-gun bursts were fired at two Israeli army jeeps and a command car near the occupied city of Gaza. He added there were no casualties.

In Beirut, Lebanon, a Palestinian commando group, the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine, claimed its men killed or injured more than 12 Israelis in raids March 20 and 25. The group admitted one of its officers and one other raider were killed in the operation. The crisis lay in

Nixon: Criticism and a Kind Word

By WALTER R. MEARS

MILWAUKEE, Wis. (AP) — Richard M. Nixon has accused Sen. Robert F. Kennedy and President Johnson of raucous, irresponsible campaigning. But he had a kind word for Sen. Eugene J. McCarthy, the on-scene Democrat who could knife into his Republican vote in Wisconsin's wide-open presidential primary.

And the proxy campaign for Johnson rolled on in the nation's second presidential primary.

That was the scene in a Wisconsin puzzle compounded by the fact that when the polls open next Tuesday, a voter can choose the ballot of either party. Nixon men are concerned lest the lack of a real contest in the Republican primary lead vast numbers of normally GOP voters to switch and cast Democratic ballots.

Their Style Criticized

While he campaigned in Wisconsin, Nixon talked nationally, in a recorded radio address which criticized the campaign style of both Kennedy and Johnson.

"Never have we more needed an intelligent, rational and dispassionate discussion of the great issues," he said. "And yet seldom has debate been more raucous or more irresponsible."

Sen. Kennedy accused his fellow Democrat, President Johnson, of calling upon the darker impulses of the American spirit," the former vice president said. "The President and his supporters too often respond in kind by savage attacks on the motives of his critics."

It was in this contest that Nixon mentioned McCarthy. "We need to restore to our political dialogue the sense . . . that the processes of democracy are still effective, even focusing with the complexities of the modern day," he said. "I share the view of those who say that Sen. McCarthy's campaign has contributed significantly to this goal, that his enlistment of the enthusiasm, the energy and the faith of many who had given up on the political process is a step toward the restoration of that process itself to the place it deserves. . . ."

In Some Shadows

But he quickly added that it is not enough to focus dissent. Nixon is in a shadow campaign of sorts, for the name of California Gov. Ronald Reagan is on the GOP ballot. His supporters are planning a last-minute series of television advertisements. Also on the GOP ballot is former Minnesota Gov. Harold Stassen.

The real contest is among Democrats. McCarthy, stressing the issue that got him into the race in the first place, said Thursday the government of South Vietnam has in fact collapsed. He said in Superior it is "really too kind" to call the Saigon regime a corrupt dictatorship because that assumes there is a government there.

The Minnesota senator said the key to the problem in Vietnam is the failure to produce a viable government.

McCarthy's next date: an appearance tonight in Madison, a center of student opposition to the Vietnam war, to address Wisconsin Young Democrats.

McCarthy and Johnson are the names on the Democratic ballot. While Johnson himself has not campaigned in Wisconsin, he has not gone unrepresented. Cabinet members and aides have been exhorting Democrats to rally to the President.

Meanwhile, Kennedy declared his candidacy in Indiana's May 7 primary. McCarthy announced he would run there, too, boosting his itinerary to include nine primaries.

Nixon spent the campaign day arguing that Kennedy and McCarthy want to end the Vietnam war "whatever the cost may be."

Republicans, he said, will end the war "on a basis that will discourage more wars rather than bring another one four or five years from now."

And he appealed to Republicans to vote in their party's primary, not to switch ballots Tuesday.

Two Mishaps

Double Trouble on Broadway

By WALTER S. CLARK JR.

Several persons stood helplessly for minutes after 3:15 p.m. Thursday as they watched a driverless runaway car roll from a parked position at the curb in front of 45 Broadway and careen down the hill damaging five other vehicles and injuring a 37-year-old pedestrian.

Business people in nearby establishments and residents in the immediate area were attracted by the noise of the collisions and ran to the street to watch part of the movements of the uncontrolled 1959 sedan owned by Patricia Boughton of Box 11, Agnes Street, Port Ewen.

Police sped to the scene and an ambulance was summoned after several calls were made to authorities at the city hall. Traffic on lower Broadway was rerouted until the damaged vehicles were towed away.

Witnesses said it was fortunate that more people had not been injured before the Boughton sedan finally came to a stop, badly damaged, against the front of the building at 22 Broadway.

The multiple-collision mishap yesterday was nearly repeated shortly before 6:40 a.m. today, when a 1961 sedan owned by Robert Winchell, 57, of 47 Tompkins Street, city, rolled from the curb in front of 35 Broadway, careened across Broadway and sideswiped an electric light pole before it smashed into the front of the former Rondout Savings Bank at Broadway and Mill Street.

Winchell told investigators that he had parked the car with the emergency brake set before he left the vehicle unattended.

position at about 3:15 p.m. The Port Ewen vehicle crashed into a 1960 sedan owned by Norman Cody, of 37 Broadway, which had been parked at the curb.

The Cody car was pushed into a 1965 sedan owned by James C. Kiernan of 37 Broadway, operator of a barber shop at that address.

The runaway Boughton vehicle apparently hadn't been damaged sufficiently to stop its rampage, and it smashed into the fourth car a 1965 suburban owned by Paul J. Snyder of Box 176-A, Ulster Park, which had been parked in front of the B. & F. Market at the corner of Broadway and Mill Street.

The Port Ewen woman's car apparently wouldn't give up. Although driverless and still out of control it continued down the grade and smashed into a 1961 suburban owned by Theresa A. Rockwell of 263 Clifton Avenue, who was traveling along Broadway and attempting a turn into Mill Street when it was hit.

Police reported the Boughton sedan moved further down the hill and hit a 1967 sedan owned by Donald E. DeGroot of 61 Country Club Drive, Mt. Marion, causing considerable damage to

Minority Group Hiring

Commission Endorses Editorial

A recommendation that local public officials, including the mayor, alderman, county legislators and members of community agencies hire more members of minority groups was made last night by the Kingston Human Relations Commission.

Endorsing the Kingston Daily Freeman's Wednesday night editorial, "Hire the Jobless", the commission also specified that members of school boards, the Kingston Housing Authority and the Urban Renewal Agency hire members of minority groups on public projects.

The commission agreed to write Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, Sen. Jacob K. Javits and Congressman Joseph Y. Resnick urging them to use their influence in the matter.

The Freeman editorial asked that not only public agencies employ members of minority groups in greater number but that private firms have a specific hiring plan for the hard-core unemployed.

It also suggested that using local labor in community construction projects would put a dent in the local unemployment roll.

"Anyone who receives a tax dollar should be obliged to help that community by making a maximum effort to give employment to the jobless there."

Levine Named As Planning Board Member

Announcement of the appointment of Morton Levine to the Kingston Planning Board has been made by the office of Mayor Raymond W. Garrahan.

Levine, who resides at 130 Roosevelt Avenue, replaces Frank L. Casciaro of 295 Flatbush Avenue whose term expired Feb. 5.

Levine will serve on the board until Feb. 1971. Other members acting in a similar capacity are William E. Davis, Gerald Prosser, Thomas Wickham, city engineer and board chairman and Aaron Klein, corporation counsel.

Home Burglarized

The summer residence of Dr. Leslie Markovich of Broadview Road, Woodstock was burglarized and furnishings and appliances valued at $884 were taken, it was reported to the County Sheriff's Office Thursday. Town of Woodstock Constable Edward L. Snyder reported entry was gained by forcing the garage door. Items taken and listed by County Investigator Harold T. Bowers included a portable Singer sewing machine valued at $400; a 16MM Revere movie camera $300; four gold antique picture frames $125, and a set of chinaware $59.

WILL STAND TRIAL — A U. S. district judge has ordered Robert Lipman, 37, of New York, extradited to Britain to stand trial for the murder of pretty French model Claude Danielle Delbarre, 18, who was severely beaten about the face with a strip of bed sheet in her mouth. (UPI TELEPHOTO).

247 Dutchess Votes For Fish Candidacy

Hamilton Fish Jr. received 247 delegate votes out of a possible 285 in the unofficial Dutchess County Republican convention last night in his drive for the congressional nomination for Congress in the 28th district.

He now has collected the unanimous endorsement of the Republican county committees in Ulster, Greene, and Columbia, along with about 87 per cent of the Dutchess committee.

Fish has also received the unanimous backing of the executive committees in all the counties including Schoharie, which will convene its full committee on April 11.

According to a spokesman for G. Gordon Liddy, the assistant district attorney of Dutchess County is still determined to go into a primary battle with the Millbrook attorney and congressional standard bearer in 1968, Fish.

Informed sources indicate that a primary fight will be costly. Dutchess County will be forced to spend some $25,000 to print up the ballots, open up the machinery, and get four "watchers," two Republicans and two Democrats, for each of the county's 148 election districts.

In other Dutchess County action last night, George Reid, chairman of the board of representatives, was chosen as the county's Republican chairman to succeed State Sen. Jay P. Rolison Jr.

Emile Betros, Poughkeepsie attorney, was nominated to seek the assembly post now held by Democrat Victor C. Waryas.

May 13 will be the day for the filing of petitions, and it will be known officially whether Liddy intends to battle Fish in a primary.

Memorial Day Law Closer to Adoption

By ALBERT J. CAWEIN

No objections were voiced Thursday night to a proposed local law which would regulate commercial and business activities on Memorial Day from among nearly 65 persons attending a public hearing held in the legislator's rooms of the county office building.

Several representatives of county veterans organizations spoke on the subject including former Saugerties Supervisor Peter M. Williams of Ulster County American Legion; Sidney Lane of Kingston Veterans Association and Bernard Nolan of the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

Williams, who proposed the original resolution at the County Legislature session remarked that it seemed strange that such a law was necessary to enforce observance of such a solemn day.

Joseph Martorana, R-9th District, chairman of the Veterans Committee of the legislature said he hoped this law, if adopted, will serve as a reminder to the public of the real meaning of Memorial Day.

Will Consider July 4
Town of Ulster Supervisor Ted Musialkiewicz observed that the law should also include Independence Day, July 4 and some members of the committee said they would review this suggestion.

Legislator William West, R-Woodstock scored the exploitation of Memorial Day and agreed the local law would curb this exploitation.

County Legislator Chairman Peter J. Savago presided at the hearing and Clerk of the Legislature Edward Mance read a copy of the proposed local law.

The proposed local law if adopted at the County Legislature session April 18 would become effective immediately and ready for implementation on this year's observance May 30.

Penalties for violation will not exceed $1,000 and may also include imprisonment.

Exceptions to the local law will be restaurants, delicatessens, food shops, news and tobacco stores, gasoline stations, drug stores and others. Articles of food as groceries may be sold only before 10 a. m. and after 5 p. m.

The proposed law should also prohibit advertising of special Memorial Day sales and other holiday sales promotions.

Several representatives of county business firms also spoke on the proposed law, but none objected.

On the advertising restriction, it was clarified by the committee that the law would not prohibit per-holiday sales.

Under the law enactment all business establishments except those regulated by the State Liquor Authority will close and remain closed during public memorial services in their respective village, town or city. There would be an exception if there is an emergency need.

Initiated By Legion

The proposal for Memorial Day closings was initiated by Ulster County American Legion in a resolution at the county meeting presented by former Saugerties Supervisor Williams, a past county commander.

REG. NO. 122

KINGSTON, NEW YORK, MARCH 29, 1968

That Day Is Almost Here

IT-Day is so close you can feel its wind blowing down your neck. Income taxes for individuals are due April 15, as if anyone who pays them didn't know.

What many may not know is the fact that on a per persons basis, the $186 billion the U.S. Government projects is spending for the fiscal year beginning July 1 next will come to $940 each. This figure was reached by the Tax Foundation, Inc. It is based on the 1969 budget figures which this year include not only "regular" spending but trust fund spending (Social Security, highways etc.)

Counting the 10 per cent surcharge which President Johnson has been urging, total 1968 receipts are estimated at $178 billion. Also counting on a cut in expenditures of $9 billion, which Johnson hinted he might accept in order to get his tax surcharge from a reluctant Congress, the ultimate spending figure would be $177 billion. That would put the budget in balance for the first time since the beginning of the Kennedy-Johnson era.

But we were talking about the impact of the budget on individuals. The new spending figure of $186 billion represents an increase of $10.5 billion over what is expected to be spent in the current fiscal year 1968, ending June 30. That is a $53 increase per American. So it is important to each of us to see the $9 billion cut Johnson hinted he would accept—and Rep. Wilbur Mills, chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, says is still not enough.

As we reminded you at first, IT-Day is coming fast. Thought you'd like to know what you as an individual American are expected to fork over. Not actually, for some will pay much more and others much less, or not at all. But the income tax per person to pay off the budget averages out at $940. Now you can figure out whether you are average, super, or under average. Good luck.

The Smoking Decline

Are youngsters really smoking less? A nationwide sampling of youngster between 12 and 18 years of age by the Clinton Research Service of Philadelphia produced a result so startling that the federal office that authorized and paid for it had it checked to substantiate the figures before releasing the results. They seemed too good.

For they showed that smoking among youngsters in the age group interviewed, both boys and girls, had dropped 10 per cent. Even more encouraging, there is an "overwhelming awareness" among teenagers that smoking is a hazard to health. And few of the teenagers expect to be smoking five years from now.

Dr. Daniel Horn, co-author of the historic 1964 report of the Surgeon General which warned that there is a causative link between lung cancer and other major diseases and the continued use of tobacco, was elated. As director of the National Clearing House for Smoking and Health, an agency of the U.S. Health Service, he noted it was the first time since the report was issued that an appreciable drop in smoking levels among youngsters had been established over three successive months.

Footnote to parents: It was found that smoking by parents has an important influence on the habits of the young. It's not so much their peers who lead them into the smoking habit as their parents. Parents who want their children to stop smoking must themselves stop first.

Freedom Struggles

Behind the Iron Curtain today, turbulence is greater than at any time since the Hungarian uprising in 1956. Students demonstrated for more freedom in Poland despite police tear gas and clubs. Czechoslovakia is considering a role for non-Communist parties, which would be the first break in the political system. And Rumania openly disagrees with Soviet Union leadership.

The Soviet Union is keeping silent about these turbulences, but the Voice of America and other Western radio stations keep the people in Eastern Europe advised of what is going on. The Polish demonstrations are especially embarrassing because the Soviet is trying to silence—with harsh prison sentences—intellectuals demanding literary freedom. There are even rumors that a group of intellectuals plans a march on Moscow.

Without overestimating these signs of dissidence—remembering the tanks with which Hungarian freedom fighters were overcome and East Germans were cowed—we nonetheless welcome the new eruptions as examples of inner struggles which should give the Communist authorities pause before they embark on other new foreign adventures. Their home front needs to be shored up first.

David Lawrence Says

Eisenhower Speaks Out On Vietnam Dissenters

WASHINGTON — When Dwight D. Eisenhower speaks out emphatically about the Vietnam war, his words carry significance in this country. For he is not only President of the United States eight years but previously served as the Supreme Commander of the Allied Forces in Europe during World War II. His experience with war problems, therefore, covered civilian as well as military responsibilities. While in the White House, he had to deal with the concluding phases of the Korean war and grave crises in the Middle East and in the Far East.

Mr. Eisenhower is a Republican, but he deplores partisanship in the debate over the Vietnam conflict. He asks what has become of "a noble concept called patriotism," and laments the fact that the "enemies of freedom" throughout the world—from Hanoi to Moscow—"must be rejoicing" when they read what is being said inside the United States. He regrets that public men and private citizens often substitute emotion for logic and the facts. He adds: "Not long ago, for example, a young U.S. Senator was quoted as saying that if we are fighting in Vietnam to protect ourselves, then we must concede that we are being selfishly immoral. To me this seems the height of tortured reasoning, if not worse. Certainly, we are fighting to defend ourselves and other free nations against the eventual domination of Communism. In my opinion it would be grossly immoral not to resist a tyranny whose openly avowed purpose is to subjugate the earth—and particularly the United States of America. The Senator was indulging in sophistry, and I suspect his purpose was political rather than patriotic."

The former president declares that the current "raucous confrontation" goes far beyond honorable dissent. While conceding the importance of dissent and freedom of speech, he condemns the resort to force in open defiance of the laws of the land. He points out, moreover, that trying to prevent recruiting officers from doing their job, and the burning of draft cards as well as other "illegal actions" do not constitute honorable dissent. He says bluntly: "It is rebellion, and it verges on treason."

Mr. Eisenhower singles out for criticism the "armchair strategists" who snipe at every aspect of the conflict. He continues:

"They never seem to lack a rostrum for their pronouncements. They are quoted endlessly and prominently in the press and on the airwaves, and of course their words give aid and comfort to the enemy and thus prolong the war."

These and comments on other points as well are contained in a copyrighted article in the April issue of "Reader's Digest," out this week. Mr. Eisenhower recalled the policies of the United States in previous decades. He noted the measures taken to thwart the advance of Communism, such as saving Western Europe, checking aggression in Korea, and helping countries in the Western Hemisphere to resist Communist conspiracies.

Although he has played an important role in the Republican party, the former president is by no means a blind partisan. He doesn't hesitate to support the Democratic administration when he thinks it is right. He is unequivocal and firm on the subject of politics. He puts it this way:

"Here at home, this is election year, and I hope we do not permit the Vietnam war to become a divisive political issue. It is right and proper to advocate a change of leadership and to discuss the conduct of the war. But it is improper, and I think unpatriotic, to voice dissent in such a way that it encourages our enemies to believe we have lost the capacity to make a national decision and act on it. Meanwhile, I state this unequivocally: I will not personally support any peace-at-any-price candidate who advocates capitulation and the abandonment of South Vietnam."

The Vietnam war is, of course, unusual in several respects. Much more has been said in this country against American participation than has ever been expressed during a war period. Many people have read only criticisms of the Vietnam war. They are not familiar with the background of the whole Asian problem. They do not realize the dangers that could confront the United States, including the possibility of another world war, if America fails to attain its objective—to help the people of a small country repel aggression and prevent conquest by the Communists.

Supporters Flock to Rocky; 'Race Not Over,' Aides Say

By BRUCE BLOSSAT

NEA Washington Correspondent
WASHINGTON (NEA)—Republican politicians with unrelieved, nagging doubts about Richard M. Nixon's ability to win are working the telephones to New York as if Gov. Nelson Rockefeller's March 21 decision not to run had caught them with cotton in their ears.

Impressed by the flood of interest which began surging soon after the governor's announcement, an associate of Rockefeller says:

"We're very much in the ball game. My best objective judgment is that this race is far from over."

The governor's decision against an active candidacy and especially against entry into the May 28 Oregon primary was clearly an effort to regain the detached status—available only for a draft—which he had before Michigan Gov. George Romney's withdrawal Feb. 28.

The big question was whether this could really be achieved, whether the letdown among Rockefeller's most vocal moderate backers might be so great that Nixon could thereafter be regarded as having the 1968 Republican presidential nomination locked up.

The evidence pouring into New York with almost every ring of the telephone is scotching that fear. Whatever public wailing may have been heard

March 21 from disappointed moderate governors and others, the private word from many party leaders—some of them, surprising enough, thought to be Nixon men—is strongly upbeat.

Obviously their voice was not heard in sufficient force while the New Yorker was reviewing his long-held position of aloofness.

Of all the things which helped to confirm Rockefeller in that stance, probably nothing struck him as more curious than the argument advanced by some of the 17 GOP senators who breakfasted with him in Washington March 19. Favoring Nixon, they urged the governor to get into the race to provide a little window-dressing competition and thus rivet more public attention on their candidate.

Says a Rockefeller aide: "You can imagine the governor lending himself as scenery."

That same day, of course, he decided not to jump in. Almost a week earlier he had received stiff written recommendations against active entry. As one friend puts it:

"It should be understood, though, that the basic gravitation during the period of review was always not to change from our earlier course."

The reasons for this stance have been reported in this column and elsewhere more than once, and were rather well-reflected in the governors public statement March 21 in New York.

After the traumatic experiences involved in his 1964 defeat by Barry Goldwater, Rockefeller totally lost his taste for combat. He wants no more open confrontations with the party's right wing, which would be painful personally and, in his view, political divisive.

Though he and key aides conveyed this attitude endlessly both to politicians and newsmen, many just would not believe it. But it has at times been an honest assertion of his position.

Reinforcing this has been the governor's equally powerful conviction that easy-talking moderates who said they wanted him would not put their natural convention delegates where their mouths are.

The moderates gave him no support in 1964, and Rockefeller could not this time find the hard currency of either delegates or open personal commitment in all the cheering section verbiage that poured into his office after Romney's pull-out.

Furthermore, the governor's men foresaw very tough organizational problems, a possible inconclusive Oregon victory, and unwanted combat with hard odds. Pro-Nixon Gov. Claude Kirk of Florida plotted a counterfeit "Rockefeller slate" which his state would have crushed in a late May primary.

Drew Pearson Says Kennedy Uses Blitzkrieg Politics to Win Delegates

QUEMOY-MATSU WITHDRAWAL

On March 20, Jack Anderson reported from Taipei that the United States was proposing that Chiang Kai-shek's forces withdraw from the offshore islands of Quemoy and Matsu.

These two controversial islands, within three and twelve miles from the Chinese coast, have been held by Nationalist China with U.S. support for over ten years, and have caused considerable friction both here and in Asia.

The Anderson story was taken up by the press services and the New York Times next day, with confirmation by the State Department.

WASHINGTON — The old pros in politics secretly can't help admiring Bobby Kennedy's tactics in his last-minute grab for the Presidency. Yet they wonder how far it will get.

They compare it to Hitler's blitzkrieg, during the early days of the war, which was successful not so much because the Nazis had military power but because the Low Countries thought they did.

Kennedy's campaign is carefully grooved along that same line. Most of his crowds so far have been on college campuses where he knew he could be ensured built-in enthusiasm. To offset student criticism of Kennedy's Johnny-come-lately challenge to the more courageous Gene McCarthy, Bobby has had the advantage of advance men who spend several days stoking up enthusiasm, plus usually two brass bands—all financed from the $500 million Kennedy family fortune.

McCarthy can't possibly afford either bands or advance men, let alone the $20 bills which Bobby's advance men sometimes sprinkle among student leaders.

The student receptions have the big publicity plus of making headlines and dramatic TV shots, but the old pros point out that 90 per cent of the students can't vote.

The tour through Watts and the Mexican sections of Los Angeles was extremely well organized. Banners had been painted in advance. The line of march had been well delineated. Bobby's advance men were on the ball.

However, the old pros point out that, when it comes to the final showdown, Negro leaders are for Johnson as the man who has done more for them than any President since Lincoln, while Bobby Kennedy when Attorney General couldn't even get a civil rights bill through Congress.

And regarding the Mexican minority, Johnson campaigned all over San Antonio to elect to Congress the first Mexican-American in history, Henry Gonzalez; and persuaded the Arlington National Cemetery to accept for burial a Mexican-American veteran after the local cemetery at Three Rivers, Tex., refused his body.

Telephone Blitz

The second phase of the Kennedy blitzkrieg takes the form of a telephone campaign to local leaders. This is conducted by Sen. Ted Kennedy, D-Mass., and a battery of staff members. When a Kennedy henchman phones a New York City assemblyman to ask: "Senator Kennedy wants to know whether you are with him," the assemblyman almost jumps out of his shoes. He knows that Bobby has the power and the money to run a candidate against him. Naturally, an assemblyman isn't looking for trouble. Usually he jumps to Kennedy.

Frank Rossetti, head of Tammany Hall, was one of the first to jump, even though Bobby opposed his election to be head of Tammany. "What the hell did Johnson ever do for me?" said Rossetti as he jumped.

This points to one reason for the success of the Kennedy blitz—the political vacuum in which Lyndon Johnson operates. He has neglected his local fences.

Others in New York who have jumped are the following Congressmen: Jonathan Bingham of the Bronx, John Dowd just across the Hudson River, William F. Ryan of Manhattan, James Scheuer of the Bronx, and Benjamin Rosenthal of Long Island.

It's significant that all are young Congressmen from marginal districts that could easily go Republican. They can't afford a Kennedy-backed Democrat running against them in the primary. Yet this was what they faced if they didn't jump.

Bobby has usually talked personally to key Congressmen. His argument is "This is my state and I need all the delegates. If I don't have my own state with me at the convention, what do I look like? If the leaders are not with me, I'm going to run my own slate."

Loyal to LBJ

This argument has swayed a lot of delegates, though a lot are still sticking with Johnson. In upper New York, Joe Crangle, Democratic leader of Erie County and privately for Bobby, took a telephone poll. He found that the chairmen of all upstate cities, including Buffalo, were sticking with Johnson.

All leaders from the 11 upstate counties met in Rochester after Bobby announced. "I said Rep. Richard McCarthy, and all reaffirmed for Johnson. That leaves Crangle of Erie County a lone island of indecision."

Crangle, incidentally, was the author of the Feb. 14 resolution pledging support to the President. "We would be ingrates if we did not stick with the President after all he has done for this part of New York," said Rep. McCarthy. "He has done more to stop pollution than any other President in history. Lake Erie has now become a test case to clean up pollution. I am sure most of Erie County will be for him regardless of Joe Crangle."

Another new Congressman whom the Kennedys were not able to sway away was Robert Tiernan of Rhode Island. They approached him carefully, first via local leaders, who asked if he would mind talking to Sen. Ted Kennedy. Tiernan said he didn't mind, so Teddy called. He was very polite, no arm-twisting, asked about political conditions in Rhode Island, hinted that it would be a great honor to have Tiernan's support.

Congressman Tiernan, however, gave out a statement that he was sticking with Johnson, though he reserved the possibility of changing his mind if the war dragged on. Other top leaders in Rhode Island are also staying with Johnson, including Sen. Claiborne Pell, who also issued a statement condemning the war but praising the President. "I sort of waffled," he confessed later.

Claim Austerity Doesn't Mean Lower Standard of Living

By CARLTON KENT

Chicago Sun-Times Special

WASHINGTON — The White House yesterday refused to define national austerity as a reduction in the American standard of living.

Nor would it agree with Treasury Undersecretary Joseph W. Barr, who testified Monday that the nation cannot afford both guns in Vietnam and the butter of domestic programs at home.

Press Secretary George Christian said the President, who recently urged national austerity, would be reasonable about Congressional demands to reduce the federal budget. A number of Congressional leaders have demanded budget cuts as a prerequisite to Mr. Johnson's 10 per cent anti-inflation tax increase.

But those budget cuts, Christian said, did not amount to a cut in the butter. Nor did it mean the nation could not afford, as Barr has suggested, the costs of the Vietnam war and domestic social gains, Christian said.

"I don't know what Sec. Barr had in mind," Christian said. "Obviously, we need the tax bill, and he has certainly been urging its passage."

"Obviously, we are going to have to defend freedom abroad, and social progress here. I realize that's referred to as guns and butter."

A reporter asked about Barr's statement to the Senate Foreign Relations Committee that the term austerity both "if we are willing to reduce our standard of living." The under secretary added:

"We are a great and powerful country and we can do a lot. But if we are willing to get down to the subsistence level like the Russians or someone else, perhaps we could accomplish all these things."

"I never heard the President use it in those terms," Christian replied. "I've heard him use the term austerity in the light of differences on the Hill about achieving austerity by passing the tax bill—and the feeling of some in Congress, some in very responsible positions—that there must be more austerity in government spending."

Threat to Panama's Boom

By WILLIAM MONTALBANA

(Chicago Daily News Service)

Panama City, Panama, March 27 — continuing political unrest is threatening Panama's position as having Latin America's fastest growing economy.

Merchants, businessmen and bankers fear that a prolonged period of crisis or that the outbreak of violence will destroy the boom.

One small businessman said yesterday his trade was 80 per cent off and tellers in a downtown bank reported only about half the normal number of customers, although all businesses were open as usual.

Banks were believed deferring most loan approvals pending outcome of the crisis and local and foreign businessmen were said to be delaying action on new investment decisions.

Economic observers were confident however that the slowdown, most noticeable in the last two days, would prove only temporary and quickly reverse itself if the political situation improved.

The political unrest, brewing for three weeks as an offshoot of the campaigning for presidential elections, reached a climax Sunday when the National Assembly voted to oust President Marco Robles for violating the Constitution and installed Vice President Max Delvalle to replace him.

Robles rejected the action and the National Guard refused to support it—leaving Panama with two presidents, each claiming to be the only legal one under the Constitution.

The dispute is to go to the Supreme Court Monday but there is the threat of violence and the additional possibility of paralyzing sit-ins by anti-Robles forces before then.

Favorable economic conditions and a strong measure of confidence in the business community saw a net economic growth of about 6 per cent in 1967.

The increase, the largest in Latin America, extended a boom that began in 1964. Before the political dispute arose there were indications this year would be even better last.

Unemployment in Panama is down a third from last year to about 8 per cent.

New construction sites for large apartment houses, office buildings and hotels dot the city. There has been encouraging industrial development and more is under consideration.

Businessmen believe that one reason the political situation is not any worse is that more people are working and are more preoccupied with economic than political considerations in an atmosphere of growing prosperity.

It is the only place in the hemisphere, for example in which the three largest U.S. banks — Bank of America, First National City Bank and Chase Manhattan—all have offices.

A number of new banks have been established in the last year, prompting one observer to comment wryly: "Whenever a cantina closes, somebody opens a new bank."

Among the factors encouraging development has been the absence of inflation in an open, dollar-based economy, $100,000,000 (M) in alliance for progress aid since 1961, growing confidence the United States and Panama would settle their differences and a good record of stability in the last four years.

The current situation, however, is jeopardizing the momentum of development and if the situation deteriorates further could halt it altogether.

Though he and key aides conveyed this attitude endlessly both to politicians and newsmen, many just would not believe it. But it has at all times been an honest assertion of his position.

Reinforcing this has been the governor's equally powerful conviction that easy-talking moderates who said they wanted him would not put their natural convention delegates where their mouths are. The moderates gave him no support in 1964, and Rockefeller could not this time find the hard currency of either delegates or open personal commitment in all the cheering-section verbiage that poured into his office after Romney's pull-out.

Furthermore, the governor's men foresaw very tough organizational problems, a possible inconclusive Oregon victory, and unwanted combat in Nebraska and other states with hard odds. Pro-Nixon Gov. Claude Kirk of Florida plotted a counterfeit "Rockefeller slate" which his state would have crushed in a late May primary.

Drew Pearson Says Kennedy Uses Blitzkrieg Politics to Win Delegates

QUEMOY-MATSU WITHDRAWAL

On March 20, Jack Anderson reported from Taipei that the United States was proposing that Chiang Kai-shek's forces withdraw from the offshore islands of Quemoy and Matsu.

These two controversial islands, within three and twelve miles from the Chinese coast, have been held by Nationalist China with U.S. support for over ten years, and have caused considerable friction both here and in Asia.

The Anderson story was taken up by the press services and the New York Times next day, with confirmation by the State Department.

WASHINGTON — The old pros in politics secretly can't help admiring Bobby Kennedy's tactics in his last-minute grab for the Presidency. Yet they wonder how far it will get.

They compare it to Hitler's blitzkrieg, during the early days of the war, which was successful not so much because the Nazis had military power but because the Low Countries thought they did.

Kennedy's campaign is carefully grooved along that same line. Most of his crowds so far have been on college campuses where he knew he could be ensured built-in enthusiasm. To offset student criticism of Kennedy's Johnny-come-lately challenge to the more courageous Gene McCarthy, Bobby has had the advantage of advance men who spend several days stoking up enthusiasm, plus usually two brass bands—all financed from the $500 million Kennedy family fortune.

McCarthy can't possibly afford either bands or advance men, let alone the $20 bills which Bobby's advance men sometimes sprinkle among student leaders.

The student receptions have the big publicity plus of making headlines and dramatic TV shots, but the old pros point out that 90 per cent of the students can't vote.

The tour through Watts and the Mexican sections of Los Angeles was extremely well organized. Banners had been painted in advance. The line of march had been well delineated. Bobby's advance men were on the ball.

However, the old pros point out that, when it comes to the final showdown, Negro leaders are for Johnson as the man who has done more for them than any President since Lincoln, while Bobby Kennedy when Attorney General couldn't even get a civil rights bill through Congress.

And regarding the Mexican minority, Johnson campaigned all over San Antonio to elect to Congress the first Mexican-American in history, Henry Gonzalez; and persuaded the Arlington National Cemetery to accept for burial a Mexican-American veteran after the local cemetery at Three Rivers, Tex., refused his body.

Telephone Blitz

The second phase of the Kennedy blitzkrieg takes the form of a telephone campaign to local leaders. This is conducted by Sen. Teddy Kennedy, D-Mass., and a battery of staff members. When a Kennedy henchman phones a New York City assemblyman to ask: "Senator Kennedy wants to know whether you are with him," the assemblyman almost jumps out of his shoes. He knows that Bobby has the power and the money to run a candidate against him. Naturally, an assemblyman isn't looking for trouble. Usually he jumps to Kennedy.

Frank Rossetti, head of Tammany Hall, was one of the first to jump, even though Bobby opposed his election to be head of Tammany. "What the hell did Johnson ever do for me?" said Rossetti as he jumped.

This points to one reason for the success of the Kennedy blitz—the political vacuum in which Lyndon Johnson operates. He has neglected his local fences.

Others in New York who have jumped are the following Congressmen: Jonathan Bingham of the Bronx, John Dow just across the Hudson River, William F. Ryan of Manhattan, James Scheuer of the Bronx, and Benjamin Rosenthal of Long Island. It's significant that all are young Congressmen from marginal districts that could easily go Republican. They can't afford a Kennedy-backed Democrat running against them in the primary. Yet this was what they faced if they didn't jump.

Bobby has usually talked personally to key Congressmen. His argument is "This is my state and I need all the delegates. If I don't have my own state with me at the convention, what do I look like? If the leaders are not with me, I'm going to run my own state."

Loyal to LBJ

This argument has swayed a lot of delegates, though a lot are still sticking with Johnson. In upper New York, Joe Crangle, Democratic leader of Erie County and, privately for Bobby, took a telephone poll. He found that the chairmen of all upstate cities, including Buffalo, were sticking with Johnson.

"All leaders from the 11 upstate counties met in Rochester after Bobby announced," said Rep. Richard McCarthy, "and all reaffirmed for Johnson. That leaves Crangle of Erie County a lone island of indecision."

Crangle, incidentally, was the author of the Feb. 14 resolution pledging support to the President. "We would be ingrates if we did not stick with the President after all he has done for this part of New York," said Rep. McCarthy. "He has done more to stop pollution than any other President in history. Lake Erie has now become a test case to clean up pollution. I am sure most of Erie County will be for him regardless of Joe Crangle."

Another new Congressman whom the Kennedys were not able to sway away was Robert Tiernan of Rhode Island. They approached him carefully, first via local leaders, who asked if he would mind talking to Sen. Ted Kennedy. Tiernan said he didn't mind, so Teddy called. He was very polite, no arm-twisting, asked about political conditions in Rhode Island, hinted that it would be a great honor to have Tiernan's support.

Congressman Tiernan, however, gave out a statement that he was sticking with Johnson, though he reserved the possibility of changing his mind if the war dragged on. Other top leaders in Rhode Island are also staying with Johnson, including Sen. Claiborne Pell, who also issued a statement condemning the war but praising the President.

"I sort of waffled," he confessed later.

By CARLTON KENT

Chicago Sun-Times Special
WASHINGTON — The White House yesterday refused to define national austerity as a reduction in the American standard of living.

Nor would it agree with Treasury Undersecretary Joseph W. Barr, who testified Monday that the nation cannot afford both guns in Vietnam and the butter of domestic programs at home.

Press Secretary George Christian said the President, who recently urged national austerity, would be reasonable about Congressional demands to reduce the federal budget. A number of congressional leaders have demanded budget cuts as a prerequisite to Mr. Johnson's 10 per cent anti-inflation tax increase.

But those budget cuts, Christian said, did not amount to a cut in the butter. Nor did it mean the nation could not afford, as Barr has suggested, the costs of the Vietnam war and domestic social gains, Christian said.

"I don't know what Sec. Barr had in mind," Christian said. "Obviously, we need the tax bill, and he has certainly been urging its passage."

"Obviously, we are going to have to defend freedom abroad, and social progress here. I realize that's referred to as guns and butter."

A reporter asked about Barr's statement to the Senate Foreign Relations Committee that we could afford both "if we are willing to reduce our standard of living." The under secretary added:

"We are a great and powerful country and we can do a lot. But if we are willing to get down to the subsistence level like the Russians or someone else, perhaps we could accomplish all these things..."

"I never heard the President use it in those terms," Christian replied. "I've heard him use the term austerity in the light of differences on the Hill about achieving austerity by passing the tax bill—and the feeling of some in Congress, some in very responsible positions—that there must be more austerity in government spending."

Threat to Panama's Boom

By WILLIAM MONTALBANA

Chicago Daily News Service
Panama City, Panama, March 27 — continuing political unrest is threatening Panama's position as having Latin America's fastest growing economy.

Merchants, businessmen and bankers fear that a prolonged period of crisis or that the outbreak of violence will destroy the boom.

One small businessman said yesterday his trade was 80 per cent off and tellers in a downtown bank reported only about half the normal number of customers, although all businesses were open as usual.

Banks were believed deferring most loan approvals pending outcome of the crisis and local and foreign businessmen were said to be delaying action on new investment decisions.

Economic observers were confident however that the slowdown, most noticeable in the last two days, would prove only temporary and quickly reverse itself if the political situation improved.

The political unrest, brewing for three weeks as an offshoot of the campaigning for presidential elections, reached a climax Sunday when the National Assembly voted to oust President Marco Robles for violating the Constitution and installed Vice President Max Delvalle to replace him.

Robles rejected the action and the National Guard refused to support it—leaving Panama with two presidents, each claiming to be the only legal one under the Constitution.

The dispute is to go to the Supreme Court Monday but there is the threat of violence and the additional possibility of paralyzing sit-ins by anti-Robles forces before then.

Favorable economic conditions and a strong measure of confidence in the business community saw a net economic growth of about 6 per cent in 1967.

The increase, the largest in Latin America, extended a boom that began in 1964. Before the political dispute arose there were indications this year would be even better last.

PIXies by Wohl

Unemployment in Panama is down a third from last year to about 8 per cent.

New construction sites for large apartment houses, office buildings and hotels dot the city. There has been encouraging industrial development and more is under consideration.

Businessmen believe that one reason the political situation is not any worse is that more people are working and are more preoccupied with economic than political considerations in an atmosphere of growing prosperity.

It is the only place in the hemisphere, for example in which the three largest U.S. banks—Bank of America, First National City Bank and Chase Manhattan—all have offices.

A number of new banks have been established in the last year, prompting one observer to comment wryly: "Whenever a cantina closes, somebody opens a new bank." Among the factors encouraging development has been the absence of inflation in an open, dollar-based economy, $100,000,000 (M) in alliance for progress aid since 1961, growing confidence the United States and Panama would settle their differences and a good record of stability in the last four years.

The current situation, however, is jeopardizing the momentum of development and if the situation deteriorates further could halt it altogether.

From Vietnam War

Many Doubts, Fears

BY WILLIAM L. RYAN

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Leaders in a number of areas of non-Communist Asia say they detect growing uncertainty, doubts and fears about the United States and about their own countries' futures.

Most of these doubts and fears spring from the Vietnam war, from a wish that it might end and a dread that it will, perhaps all too suddenly. That is paradoxical, but Asia is caught up in a cosmic paradox.

Some wonder whether U.S. policy one day will require a gradual withdrawal from this continent's mainland, creating a vacuum which can be filled by elements subservient to Communist China.

The uncertainty shows through all the way from the tip of Southeast Asia to South Korea.

Britain intends to end her military presence in this area in a few years, raising doubts about the future of Singapore and Malaysia. In South Korea, these days, there are openly expressed doubts about U.S. willingness to go to the mat to save that country from Communist aggression.

Enjoy Steady Boom

As much as in any other country, these feelings of uncertainty and doubt are pronounced in Thailand. This nation of 32 million is enjoying a steady boom, nourished in part by a heavy influx of American dollars. Its leaders and growingly substantial middle class feel their country is a primary target of Chinese communism.

The misgivings can be traced to a number of factors. One has been the performance of the United States in Korea at the time the intelligence ship Pueblo was seized by North Korean gunboats. Many Asians clearly infer that Uncle Sam's beard was given a sharp yank and that he dared not do anything about it.

With 525,000 troops already involved in Vietnam and more on the way, the United States, in the Asian view, is too far committed on one Asian front to risk involvement in a shooting war on a second Asian front.

Another factor in Asian doubts is the political situation in the United States.

Resent Criticism

Leaders in Thailand and South Korea, both sturdy allies of the United States, resent criticisms in America of the U.S. involvement in Vietnam. Thai leaders profess to see such criticism as part of a plot to get the Americans out entirely and leave Southeast Asia open to communism.

Some fear that North Vietnam, if it emerges with what appears to be a political victory over the United States, will be supported and encouraged by China to pursue Hanoi's stated aim to extend its domination to Laos, then Cambodia, and become an imminent threat to Thailand. These leaders concede such a development would take time, but this is not regarded as particularly consoling.

Foreign Minister Thanat Khoman of Thailand, widely regarded as one of Asia's most astute diplomats, told this correspondent he believes Peking to be expansionist and to have ambitions to dominate all Indochina and then the states surrounding it, all the way to Indonesia.

The Chinese, he says, want the Vietnam war to continue indefinitely so that it will sap the American strength and lessen the American capability of reacting elsewhere. At the same time, he says, China insists that "there must not be two lions in the same den," and thus is industriously working to keep the Russian foot out of the Asian door.

Thanat says he does not believe Russia has territorial ambitions in Southeast Asia, at least at this time, but has a negative approach to the question of peace in Vietnam. This approach, he says, is based on a Soviet fear of being involved in something which can develop into general war.

Thanat and other Thais believe their country is a primary target for subversion and violence because of the strides it is making in its economy and in its attack on rural problems. This country, says Interior Minister Praphat Charustien, is "the antechamber of war."

The Communist insurgency in Thailand's north and northeast, and to a lesser extent in the extreme south near the Malaysian border, remains a serious problem. Thanat says the Communists have been stopped in their tracks for the past year or so and have made no gains in the way of village support, but keeping them in check is an expensive and often bloody proposition.

The northeast is a dry, inhospitable land, as big as Cambodia, with more than a third of Thailand's population. Almost all are farmers, 95 per cent of whom own their own land.

To offset Red propaganda the government has shifted its sights and concentrates on the northeast area in the current five-year plan for development begun in 1967. The American aid program has encouraged this. The Thais are putting up $2 in their own money for every $1 the Americans put into the northeast program.

CANCER KICKOFF — Dr. Harri H. Janssen, president of the Ulster County Unit, American Cancer Society, met Lawrence Welk, national chairman of the Cancer Crusade, at the Crusade Kickoff of the American Cancer Society, New York State Division, in Buffalo. More than 1,000 volunteers of the Society from 54 upstate counties participated in the kickoff. The Cancer Crusade is conducted during April, National Cancer Month, to raise funds for cancer research, education, and service to cancer patients.

Esopus Prep's 68 Graduate Sunday

Esopus Prep on 9W will come full cycle April 15 after graduating the last of its students in New York City Sunday night.

A new group of New York City high school dropouts is expected to begin instruction at Esopus Prep on or near the 15th of next month. The current class, 68 strong, will graduate Sunday at the Hotel Henry Hudson on West 57th Street. The group originally consisted of 110 young men from the ghettos of New York. Twenty-six graduated Jan. 22, the remainder will receive their high school diplomas Sunday. Fourteen dropped out, which director William K. Banks considers "a pretty good percentage."

Guest speakers will be Augustus Bekman, assistant deputy fire chief in New York City and Miss Martha Valle, commissioner of the Youth Service Agency of the Human Resources Commission of New York. Bekman is the first man of his race to reach position of assistant deputy fire chief in the New York Fire Department.

Find another car under $2,000 that has all that the Renault 10 has,
and we'll buy it for you.

We believe the Renault 10 gives you more for your money than any other car.

And the fact that sales have soared since we introduced it, leads us to believe that quite a few people agree. We sold 75% more 1967 Renaults than 1966 Renaults.

But if some doubters remain, we offer this challenge: Find another car under $2,000 that has all that the Renault 10 has, and we'll buy it for you.

The Renault 10 has, as standard equipment:

4-wheel disc brakes

Disc brakes take hard braking better than drum brakes. They have long been used on super-speed, super-priced automobiles.

4 doors instead of 2

You don't have to fight the front seat to get to the back seat.

35 miles per gallon

Some people say they get more.

Contoured seats that recline for sleeping

Plus 18 other positions for when you're not sleeping.

Engine weight over the drive wheels

The drive wheels bear down on snow and ice because the engine weight bears down on them.

Turning circle of 30 feet

You can make most u-turns in one clean sweep.

4-wheel independent suspension

Each wheel moves up or down without affecting all the other wheels. So when one wheel hits a bump, only one gets bumped. The other 3 keep the car and you going in a level position.

4-speed synchromesh transmission

This matches the speeds of the engine and transmission to allow the gears to mesh easily. Which makes shifting a lot easier on you and your transmission.

Replaceable wet cylinder sleeves

When the cylinders wear out in a conventional engine, the whole engine has to be pulled out and rebored. Sometimes it pays to buy a new car. But a Renault piston moves in a replaceable wet sleeve. If the sleeve ever wears out, you can put in a new one easily and inexpensively.

Sealed liquid cooling system with expansion tank

Water-cooled engines are much quieter than air-cooled engines. However, water and anti-freeze can frequently overflow. But Renault's water-cooling system has an expansion tank to keep the overflow from escaping.

5 main-bearing engine

Instead of three bearings supporting the crankshaft, we have five. (As many as most V-8's.)

Special vents for draft-free ventilation

You can get plenty of fresh air with the windows shut. Which, incidentally, shuts out noise.

Rack and pinion steering

Eliminates play in the steering.

2-speed hot-water heater and dual defroster

Our heater uses the same hot water that circulates in the engine. So our heater heats faster and produces a more even temperature than any air-type heater.

15-inch wheel

Most economy cars have 13" or less. Our larger wheel makes fewer revolutions to go the same distance. Which saves rubber. Which saves money.

Spare tire not in trunk

If you get a flat you don't have to unload the trunk and get everything dirty.

11 cubic foot trunk capacity

We're not the biggest in this department, but neither are we the smallest. The smallest only has 2.9 cubic feet, which is about as much space as we have behind our back seat alone.

Hits a top speed of 85

That's pretty surprising considering the mileage we get.

Unique warranty

12 months/unlimited mileage.

Price—Under $2,000

Way under $2,000.

Moscow Leaders Pay Tribute to Gagarin

BY HENRY BRADSHAW
MOSCOW (AP) — The top three Soviet leaders stood under a gray Moscow sky today as an honor guard by the ashes of Russia's first hero of the space age, Yuri A. Gagarin.

Thousands of sorrowing Russians filed past the urns containing the ashes of Gagarin and Soviet Air Force Col. Vladimir S. Seryogin, the two cosmonauts were killed in the crash of a MIG trainer Thursday.

Communist party General Secretary Leonid I. Brezhnev, Premier Alexei N. Kosygin, President Nikolai V. Podgorny and other Soviet leaders stood in silent tribute as the first honor guard.

Gagarin's widow, Valentina, 33, shook with sobs under her mourning veil as she approached the urns in the black-draped Central House of the Soviet Army. Gagarin's daughters, Lena, 9, and Galya, 7, were also crying.

After a funeral Saturday Gagarin's and Seryogin's ashes will be placed in the most honorable spot in the Soviet Union, the Kremlin Wall facing Red Square.

Unofficial sources said their MIG15 UTI "Midget" plane had a flameout—the engine stopping in flight—and crashed before they could restart it or eject. The sources described their flight as a routine one to maintain flying proficiency.

the front and right of that vehicle.

By this time the end of the driverless sedan was near. After glancing off the DeGrott car it jumped the curb on the north side of Broadway below Mill Street and smashed noisily into the front of the building owned by Samuel Stone at 22 Broadway next to Stone's liquor store.

Before stopping the Boughton car reportedly hit Albert Tyler, 37, of 13 West Union Street, who evidently had stepped into a doorway to avoid being injured. Tyler complained of injuries and was taken to Benedictine Hospital by ambulance and treated for a sprained left leg. His condition was not serious, authorities said.

Tow trucks converged upon the scene after being notified by authorities, and the damaged vehicles were removed and traffic was resumed after shattered glass and pieces of twisted metal had been cleared from the pavement.

Moscow Leaders Pay Tribute to Gagarin

BY HENRY BRADSHAW
MOSCOW (AP) — The top three Soviet leaders stood under a gray Moscow sky today as an honor guard by the ashes of Russia's first hero of the space age, Yuri A. Gagarin.

Thousands of sorrowing Russians filed past the urns containing the ashes of Gagarin and Soviet Air Force Col. Vladimir S. Seryugin. The two cosmonauts were killed in the crash of a MIG trainer Thursday.

Communist party General Secretary Leonid I. Brezhnev, Premier Alexei N. Kosygin, President Nikolai V. Podgorny and other Soviet leaders stood in silent tribute as the first honor guard.

Gagarin's widow, Valentina, 33, shook with sobs under her

The Green Thumb

By GEORGE ABRAHAM

Outdoor Vines: Now's a good time to be thinking about planting hardy vines to cover unsightly walls, buildings and objects. I'm often asked for the name of a few good vines for screening effect. My nomination for the fastest growing vine is the Silver Fleece (lace) Vine, also known as Polygonum. Silver Fleece vine will grow anywhere from 12 to 20 feet a year and it's such a grower you have to keep it controlled or it will cover an entire garage. It'll need some sort of wire or trellis for encouragement, since it twines rather than sticks by adhesive discs, as other vines do. Silver Fleece vine produces large leaves, with thousands of foamy-white flowers from mid-summer to late fall.

Another good suggestion is the Trumpet creeper (Bignonia radicans). It has orange red blossoms, is hardy and will grow anywhere. It does not cover as silver lace does, but is more manageable. Other vines include Bittersweet, Dutchman's pipe, honeysuckle, climbing hydrangea, purple wisteria, to name a few good ones.

A Good House Plant: A rather foolproof plant for the home is the Kalanchoe (pronounced Kal-an-co-ee). It has fleshy leaves and clusters of showy, blossoms in red, orange and even yellow. K. pinnata is the so-called "airplant" or "magic-leaf" because tiny plantlets form along its scalloped leaf edge when pinned to a window curtain. Grow kalanchoe in bright window and keep on the cool side. Avoid overwatering. Start new plants by potting the tiny plantlets, or sowing seeds any time now. Or you can start new plants by tip cuttings.

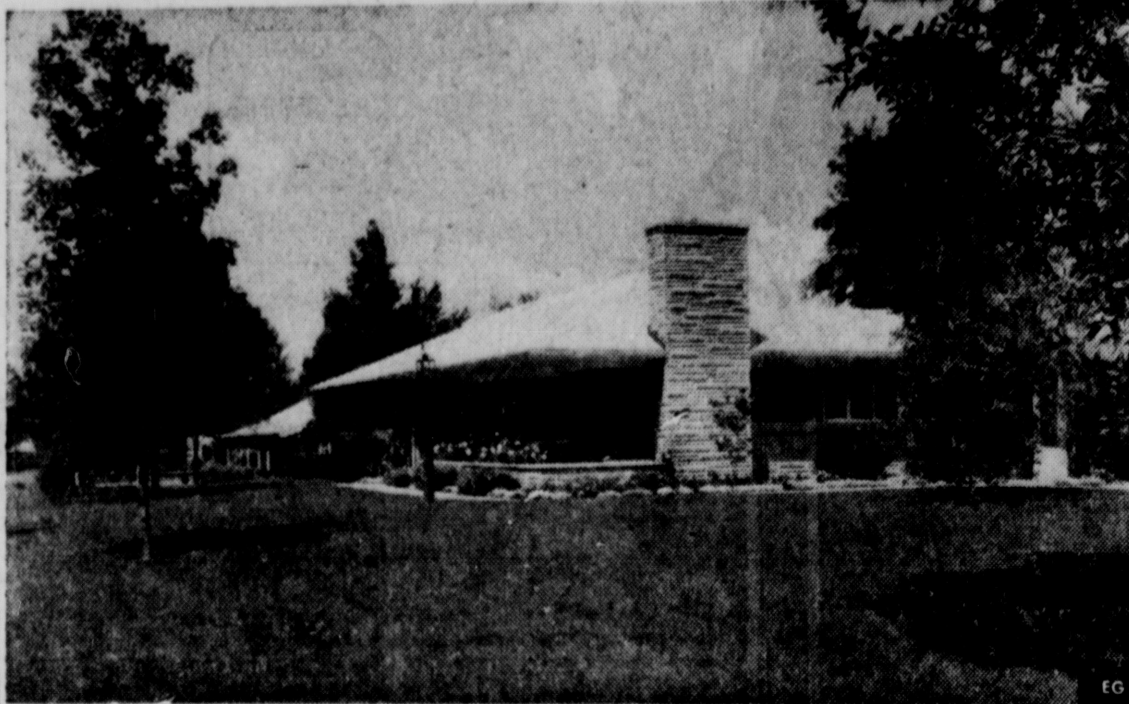

Pressure Dealing

SALINA, Kan. (AP) — More than 200 teachers in Salina and Saline County are involved in a continuing study of how to cope with "pressures in the classroom."

The teachers launched the study after a mental health discussion with Dr. Edward Greenwood, director of the school mental health program at the famed Meninger Foundation in Topeka.

The study is sponsored by the Saline County Mental Health Association and will involve both students and their teachers. Dr. Greenwood said that pressure is necessary for growth, both for the teacher and the student, but each must learn how to cope with the pressures. He urged the teachers to recognize that they enjoy helping some children more, because they are able to like them, and then to resist this tendency.

Found in Every Neighborhood

Are You a Lawn Killer

A horticultural Sherlock Holmes has come up with a new version of the game. He tells us, in effect, "your lawn says a lot about you!"

In other words, that blighted shrub in the corner of the front yard may be saying things you wouldn't divulge even to a psychiatrist. On the other hand, your lawn may be passing out some very nice compliments about you.

For better or worse, the real you is exposed right there beyond your front window. What do lawns, or front yards, tell us about the people inside the house? Well, perhaps you'll recognize a neighbor or two in these case histories.

Pete Procrastinate

Pete mails his Christmas cards on December 28th. Likewise, he waters the lawn several weeks after the drought, does his Spring fertilizing over the Fourth of July weekend, and rakes his Fall leaves on Groundhog Day, after they've jelled to a slimy, clammy broth.

Pete's problem could be cured so easily if he'd go to his neighborhood Nutro dealer and simply say, "I need help." Once he's faced his failing, he's on the way to recovery. Every two or three weeks, Pete should stop by his Nutro dealer and ask, "What am I supposed to be doing in March?" (Or whenever.) The dealer can clue him in, suggest the proper methods and give whatever advice is needed. An ally, Pete, is what you need. And who knows? Perhaps your attractive, well-cared-for lawn will give you a burst of confidence and ambition that will help to get the Christmas cards mailed on time!

Sam Smotherlylove
When Sam was a child, his mama made him wear three overcoats starting on September 15th and popped him into the hospital every time he cleared his throat.

Not to be outdone, Sam now mows his lawn every other day and waters his grass till the front yard looks like a Louisiana rice field.

He can't understand why the grass is so pale and sickly, or why the rosebushes have stopped blooming to make roses.

A simple case of "too much of a good thing." Be loving with your lawn, Sam, but don't kill it with kindness! Here again, the Nutro Good Neighbor dealer can provide the solution, and the right product for the right job. So, cool it, Sam. And good luck!

Wendell Wasteland

Wendell's boyhood interest in such places as the frozen Tundra, the great Mohave Desert and the Utah Salt Flats is apparent in the appearance of his yard.

It's a great, dismal expanse of bare earth, relieved here and there by a lard patch of crabgrass. A tree tried to grow in Wendell's yard once, and finally died of loneliness. At night, you'd swear you can hear coyotes howling.

Wendell's excuse? "I got no green thumb." Aw, c'mon, Wendell. You don't need a green thumb these days; just a good variety of grass seed, a few hours' investment in maintenance every month, and a turf food like Nutro that won't give out.

It doesn't take much time, money, or know-how to have a decent-looking lawn. Give it a go. Before you know it, the folks next door will be thinking of you as a neighbor...rather than a nomad.

Homer Halfway

At the age of twelve, Homer was hard at work one day, building a box kite, and, right at a crucial point, got called in to dinner. Something snapped somewhere, and the kite never got finished.

Today, as a result, Homer's yard looks like a botanical patchwork quilt.

He fertilizes several strips of lawn, stops to check the time, and never gets back to the job. Consequently, one ten-foot plot of grass is a lush green while the rest is an undernourished yellow.

Homer starts watering the lawn, then loses interest. The watered spot looks like an oasis in Death Valley.

He takes a couple of turns with the mower, then goes in to watch the baseball game and doesn't return for the rest of the summer. Neighbors say that every now and then you can see wild, furry creatures dashing across the mowed strip to the safety of the waist-high grass on either side.

Homer, Homer. Why not get to know the pride of a job well done, all done? Make yourself out an easy schedule and stick to it. It's not so hard, really. And think of the embarrassment you'll be spared when folks stop referring to your yard as "The Halfway Jungle." There are many, many more case histories too numerous to examine in detail. Perhaps you're acquainted with "Turk Topsergeant," who orders his grass to grow, and fights nature as if she were "The Enemy." Or, your neighborhood may include "Kurt Keepoffthegrass," who puts little pointed spears

It's Time to Baby Your Grass

You have vowed that this year your lawn will be the best in the neighborhood. Get busy, then. It's the time to begin working on that promise.

First, remove old grass and debris accumulated since you put the lawn to bed last fall. Old, matted grass will shut off sunshine and water. Give the lawn its cleaning as early as possible, before the first sign of greening.

Perhaps the simplest way to clean is with a rotary mower that cuts, vacuums and bags debris. If you use an ordinary power mower, rake the lawn first with a broomtype rake. A sharp-toothed rake will uproot new grass.

Aerate the soil. This loosens ground compacted by winter and thus blocks water and food from penetrating to plant roots. There are power and hand aerators for purchase or rental in your garden shop.

Fertilizing is next. Use one containing nitrogen, phosphorus and potash—10-6-4—or another abundant with nitrogen (the first figure), such as 20-8-4. Feeding in spring and fall is excellent and an extra feeding of nitrogen is like a vitamin shot. Follow directions on the fertilizer bag.

Generally, watering after a feeding is good practice, but some fertilizer recipes advise against immediate watering.

Single-application chemicals are available to control weeds, insects and disease. Follow directions carefully.

If thin or bare spots have developed in your lawn, clear the damaged areas, rake vigorously to loosen the soil, and make a holding bed for new seed. Rake after reseeding to cover the seed and roll the area to implant the seed firmly in soil.

Underground, controlled watering is gaining popularity and such systems will provide proper amounts of water. Too much water can cause shallow root systems and help crabgrass gain a foothold.

Check soil closely. Since some soil absorbs water more readily than others, apply water only as fast as it can be retained.

For cool weather grasses, cutting lime to alkaline soil would to one and one-fourth inches harm new grass.

during the spring to thicken the turf and keep down weeds later. Raise the cut to one and one-half inches as summer progresses and keep it there until fall.

Warm season grasses should be cut from three-fourths of an inch to one inch. Experts say that closer cutting in spring will encourage lateral growth and turf density.

The more frequently you cut grass the better the turf should be. A rule of thumb is not to cut more than one-quarter of the leaf surface at one mowing. Cutting more can damage the plant.

Don't add lime to your lawn unless you are sure, by testing, it needs it. Lime will help your lawn if the ground is acid. Adding lime to alkaline soil would harm new grass.

You'll have Thermopane in every window of your Heritage Home ...and still save money!

No storm windows needed! Yet these Andersen windows will keep your home cooler in Summer, warmer in Winter and save on heat. (Learn about many other extras found only in Heritage Homes)

He fertilizes several strips of lawn, stops to check the time, and never gets back to the job. Consequently, one ten-foot plot of grass is a lush green while the rest is an undernourished yellow.

Homer starts watering the lawn, then loses interest. The watered spot looks like an oasis in Death Valley.

He takes a couple of turns with the mower, then goes in to watch the baseball game and doesn't return for the rest of the summer. Neighbors say that every now and then you can see wild, furry creatures dashing across the mowed strip to the safety of the waist-high grass on either side.

Homer, Homer. Why not get to know the pride of a job well done, all done? Make yourself out an easy schedule and stick to it. It's not so hard, really. And think of the embarrassment you'll be spared when folks stop referring to your yard as "The Halfway Jungle."

There are many, many more case histories too numerous to examine in detail. Perhaps you're acquainted with "Turk Topsergeant," who orders his grass to grow, and fights nature as if she were "The Enemy." Or, your neighborhood may include "Kurt Keepoffthegrass," who puts little pointed spears

It's Time to Baby Your Grass

You have vowed that this year your lawn will be the best in the neighborhood. Get busy, then. It's the time to begin working on that promise.

First, remove old grass and debris accumulated since you put the lawn to bed last fall. Old, matted grass will shut off sunshine and water. Give the lawn its cleaning as early as possible, before the first sign of greening.

Perhaps the simplest way to clean is with a rotary mower that cuts, vacuums and bags debris. If you use an ordinary power mower, rake the lawn first with a broom-type rake. A sharp-toothed rake will uproot new grass.

Aerate the soil. This loosens ground compacted by winter and thus blocks water and food from penetrating to plant roots. There are power and hand aerators for purchase or rental in your garden shop.

Fertilizing is next. Use one containing nitrogen, phosphorus and potash—10-6-4—or another abundant with nitrogen (the first figure), such as 20-8-4. Feeding in spring and fall is excellent and an extra feeding of nitrogen is like a vitamin shot. Follow directions on the fertilizer bag.

Generally, watering after a feeding is good practice, but some fertilizer recipes advise against immediate watering.

Single-application chemicals are available to control weeds, insects and disease. Follow directions carefully.

If thin or bare spots have developed in your lawn, clear the damaged areas, rake vigorously to loosen the soil, and make a holding bed for new seed. Rake after reseeding to cover the seed and roll the area to implant the seed firmly in soil.

Underground, controlled watering is gaining popularity and such systems will provide proper amounts of water. Too much water can cause shallow root systems and help crabgrass gain a foothold.

Check soil closely. Since some soil absorbs water more readily than others, apply water only as fast as it can be retained.

For cool weather grasses, cut to one and one-fourth inches during the spring to thicken the turf and keep down weeds later. Raise the cut to one and one-half inches as summer progresses and keep it there until fall.

Warm season grasses should be cut from three-fourths of an inch to one inch. Experts say that closer cutting in spring will encourage lateral growth and turf density.

The more frequently you cut grass the better the turf should be. A rule of thumb is not to cut more than one-quarter of the leaf surface at one mowing. Cutting more can damage the plant.

Don't add lime to your lawn unless you are sure, by testing, it needs it. Lime will help your lawn if the ground is acid. Adding lime to alkaline soil would harm new grass.

City Reapport - No. 4 - Rondout and Ponckhockie

EDITOR'S NOTE—In this last part of a four-part Freeman series of reapportionment in the city, the Rondout-Ponckhockie section of Kingston is covered.

By HUGH REYNOLDS

Nowhere in the city was the Supreme Court's one-man, one-vote edict more abused than in this section. Some critics of urban renewal have claimed that the federal program ruined Rondout but the fact is people have been moving Uptown, midtown and out of town from Rondout and Ponckhockie for years before the demolition crews moved in.

New Wards Nine and Ten are vast in size compared to a ward like new Ward Eight mainly because the map makers had to look far and wide for the necessary 2,251 persons, the norm for the 13 wards under this current reapportionment plan signed by Mayor Raymond W. Garraghan Jan. 3.

Figures Challenged

These two new wards encompass all of old Wards Five and Six and a large part of old Ward Four. The total population of the two new wards is 4,303 but that is based on the 1960 census figures. These figures were challenged by opponents of the plan as obsolete. They used as an example the fact that Joseph Epstein was reelected in the old Sixth Ward last November by a 57-9 vote.

With Epstein officially residing at 48 Broadway it appears he will have to run against another alderman, Clifford Sinsbaugh, the Democrat from the Fifth Ward. Sinsbaugh was swept back into office by an almost 2-1 plurality last November.

Both men are extremely well-known and popular among Downtown residents. The winner of a Democratic primary, if there is one, is almost assured a one-year term on the Council.

This current reapportionment will be in effect until 1971. Aldermen ran for one-year terms last November under the old boundaries and will run again this fall under the new ones. They will run again (in 1969) for two-year terms when the mayor and alderman-at-large are up for election.

The 1969 Council will undoubtedly be the one that acts on reapportionment but it will be under the 1970 federal census figures.

The 1970 census will be done on a block-by-block basis in Kingston, thereby eliminating many of the problems the map makers had in drawing up the 1968 reapportionment plan.

From a political viewpoint, it is expected that new Wards One, Two, Five and Six will go to the Republicans and new Wards 10, 11, 12 and 13 will go to the Democrats.

Wards Three, Four, Seven and Eight could go either way with the Democrats having the edge in the new Seventh Ward.

This series was compiled with the assistance of Thomas R. Lyle, city clerk; Aaron E. Klein, corporation Counsel and Edward Norton, chairman of the Common Council Reapportionment Committee.

Backs Joe's Charge

A high-ranking Ohio Farm Bureau official has corroborated charges made by Congressman Joseph Y. Resnick of questionable stock practices by certain Farm Bureau cooperatives in Ohio.

In an article by Robert Havel in the Cleveland Plain Dealer, D. R. Stanfield, executive vice-president of the Ohio Farm Bureau Federation, said that he would shy away from buying stock in a county Farm Bureau cooperative until he had carefully checked its financial soundness.

Resnick has charged that some Farm Bureau cooperatives fail to redeem patronage dividends that members receive for dealing with co-ops. He has particularly cited the Ashland County Farm Bureau as one that has not redeemed dividends for some 20 years.

In the article, Stanfield is quoted as saying that he can not explain why this is so, since "The Ashland County co-op is in good financial shape."

A cursory investigation by Ohio Attorney General William B. Saxble had cleared the co-ops of any illegality. When questioned about this, Stanfield agreed that perhaps new laws might be necessary to regulate stock sales.

When reminded that Representative John M. Ashbrook of Ohio, who is friendly towards the Farm Bureau has also questioned these co-op practices, Stanfield said, "We have supported Ashbrook in the past but we may take another look at that support." Congressman Resnick called this, "the most blatant case of political blackmail I've seen in a long time."

Kingston Vols Extinguish Brush Fires

Kingston firefighters extinguished two brush fires in the city last evening bringing the total number of brush fires in Kingston since Sunday to 10. The total number of brush fires in the county since Sunday is 70.

According to a spokesman for the Kingston Fire Department, there was a blaze at Clearwater Park on Chapel Street at 6:24 p. m.

Engines 1 and 6 of Rapid Hose Company, under the command of Deputy Chief Glen Southard responded to the fire, extinguishing it with Indian tanks and brooms.

They returned at 6:54 p. m. At 7:29 p. m., a brush fire broke out near the Cordts Hose Company on Delaware Avenue.

Under Deputy Southard, the firefighters extinguished the blaze with booster lines, Indian tanks, and fire brooms.

Engines from Union and Cordts Hose companies responded, along with engine 3 from the Cornell Fire Station. The firemen returned to their headquarters at 8:06 p. m.

Indicted on Drugs

Three Brooklyn teenagers apprehended by state police November 2, 1967 near Ellenville and allegedly in possession of marijuana were indicted late Wednesday by the March grand jury. They are Robert P. Kroszynski, 16; Dennis H. Babstock, 17; and Thomas R. Sturges, 16. They were charged with criminal possession of a dangerous drug, first degree. The trio was stopped by Ellenville Trooper Oscar Gray while walking on the wrong side of Route 209. Subsequent investigation revealed they were in possession of marijuana, police said.

Two Escape Injury

Two women escaped injury at 4:35 p. m. Thursday when their cars were involved in a collision on Route 145 in the Town of Durham. Trooper D. G. McPhail of Leeds reported Eleanor A. Moulton, 28, of Leeds, stopped on the pavement to discharge a passenger when the front of a car driven by Emily Van Wie, 27, of RD 2, Catskill, was in collision with the left rear of the stopped vehicle. Troopers cited the Leeds woman for stopping on the pavement.

Adjourn Cases In City Court

Two cases were adjourned in Kingston city court today. One case dealt with a violation of the Conservation Act and the other involved burglary in the third degree.

Both defendants pleaded innocent. William L. Shanks, 44, of 89 South Manor Avenue was arrested at 4:45 a. m. this morning by Kingston police officer Richard Spaulding for carrying a loaded .32 caliber Winchester rifle in his car, a violation of the Conservation Act.

He also was charged with speeding. Spaulding reportedly posted $500 bail and Judge Hubert Richter adjourned his trial until April 2.

Spaulding is represented by Attorney Sidney Schmukler of New York City.

Richard D. Deyo, 35, of Kingston, allegedly responded to a summons for his arrest and turned himself in to police headquarters last night.

He is charged with the burglary of Congregation Agudas Achim Synagogue on 24 West Union Street on March 1.

Reportedly taken in the third degree burglary charge was a silver collection box containing $6.35, five bottles of liquor and one bottle of wine valued at $32.

He pleaded innocent and his case was adjourned until April 2.

Q — I depend on my stocks for income. Please tell me whether I should hold or sell New England Electric System; El Paso Natural Gas; Libby-Owens-Ford Glass. I am most deeply concerned about New England Electric System—D.D.

A — I don't believe that you need to be deeply concerned about any of your holdings. New England Electric System has been ordered by the Securities and Exchange Commission to divest itself of its gas utility companies but according to my record — these accounted for a relatively small proportion of earnings in 1967. I believe the dividend is safe and the yield is 5 1/2 per cent. If you are deeply concerned, I suggest that you switch into Pacific Lighting, selling on a 5 1/2 per cent basis. I would exchange El Paso for Tennessee, which yields a little less but has a better future, in my opinion. Your Libby-Owens-Ford Glass is a strong stock in its field and I certainly advise you to hold it.

Q — Will you please let me know about older Series H savings bonds after maturity? Do we have to cash them in and purchase a new issue or are they automatically extended? If I have to cash in and re-purchase, how much would a $500 bond start paying?—H.A.

A — I am pleased to tell you that all Series H bonds with issue dates from June, 1952, to May, 1959, have been granted automatic extension for 10 years from the date of maturity. During the extension period these bonds pay a straight 4.15 per cent annually on the face amount. On a $500 bond this means that you would receive in the first year of extension and each year thereafter to maturity — $20.75 annually, with half of this sum sent to you by the Treasury Department every six months. Apparently you have an H bond maturing and I advise you strongly to accept the automatic extension privilege.

Rockefeller's Proposed Budget: Albany War of Wills Gets Hotter

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — The legislature's war of wills over Gov. Rockefeller's proposed $5.5-billion budget grew hotter today as lawmakers studied a Democratic plan to junk the administration's proposed 20 per cent surcharge on state income taxes.

The central figure — for the moment, at least — was Assembly Speaker Anthony J. Travia, who offered Thursday a substitute plan for raising the income taxes only of high wage earners.

Swift, Sharp Criticism

That concept, unveiled at a Capitol press conference late Thursday, drew swift and sharp criticism from the Republican leadership of the senate.

Travia's program would make "New York far and away the highest income tax state in the nation," said Senate Majority Leader Earl W. Brydges.

Brydges and his GOP colleagues called a conference today to review the Democratic maneuvering and their own approach as the state swept toward the end of the current fiscal year without a settlement on a fiscal program for the 1968-69 fiscal year.

The situation seemed serious enough to Rockefeller to bring him back to Albany on a rare Thursday trip here during the session.

After conferring with Brydges, Lt. Gov. Malcolm Wilson and other leaders for about an hour Thursday night, the Republican governor told newsmen he might remain in town over the weekend if circumstances warranted.

The Capitol scene Thursday belonged to Travia, however. The powerful Democratic leader stepped forward with a plan which, he contended, was "much more fair and equitable than the governor's."

Travia told newsmen that under his plan, only about 5 per cent — those earning $35,000 a year or more before taxes — would be affected by an income tax boost.

Rockefeller's proposal would have all income taxpayers paying 20 per cent more. Travia estimated his income tax proposal would produce about $180 million in the new fiscal year, compared with $270 million estimated from the Rockefeller plan.

Keystone of Program

That was the keystone of the Travia program, but he proposed to complement it by delaying a major state-aid payment.

To supplement the tax approach, Travia recommended delaying a payment of per-capita aid — financial support given to communities for use with no strings attached. He said the state could save $50 million in the new fiscal year by postponing payments made next January or February until the following April 15.

Travia offered those proposals in addition to the $141 million in budget cuts and economies suggested earlier this week by the legislature's financial committees.

Part of Travia's fiscal blueprint had been made known through sources, as he and the Republican senators sought.

Driver Unhurt

The driver escaped unhurt but the rental he was operating was badly damaged in a mishap on Route 9W at Ulster Park early today when he swerved to avoid hitting a dog and rammed into 10 guard posts. According to Sheriff's Deputy Gary W. Bayliss the operator was John A. Tibbroke, 28, of West Butternut, England, driving a rented 1968 sedan. He was proceeding south on 9W when a dog darted across the highway.

In order to avert hitting the dog he swerved to the right, lost control knocking down 10 guideposts and came to rest straddling the guidewire. The mishap occurred at 12:55 a. m. near the Cross Road.

ways of shrinking the $494 million in tax increases Rockefeller says he needs to help balance his budget.

By mid-Thursday it was clear that the GOP senators were weighing seriously the possibility of raising the cigarette tax even though it was jumped from 5 to 10 cents a pack only three years ago. As government fiscal authorities see it, each penny increase would yield about $20 million.

Cool to the Idea

That idea, however, seemed to hold no charm for Travia. When asked whether he might go along with such an increase, he replied, "I don't intend to."

Travia's reasoning was that further increases in this tax would push the cigarette industry into deep financial trouble. Rockefeller's tax program was built around the proposed 20 per cent income — tax surcharge. The governor also proposed a dime-a-fifth boost in the liquor tax, estimated to yield $15 million, a cent-a-gallon increase in the gasoline tax, worth $21 million, and various business-tax increases totaling $182 million.

Casting his eye over the entire Rockefeller program, Travia told newsmen he saw "certain inequities" regarding the liquor, insurance, bank and utility tax increases. He said his approach would permit reductions totaling $25 million in this area. He promised to detail his recommendations later.

Open to Gas Hike

However, he indicated that he would accept the proposal for a higher gasoline tax.

Even as Travia spoke, it appeared questionable whether the state would move into the new fiscal year Monday with an approved budget.

To meet that possibility, Travia said he had prepared legislation that would permit the state to continue operations at the spending level of the old budget and to pay its workers on that basis.

Under the present tax law, income taxes are levied on a scale ranging upward from 2 per cent on the first $1,000 of annual net income—after all deductions — to 10 per cent on net income beyond $15,000.

Travia suggested that, instead of raising everyone's income taxes by 20 percent, that the state create seven more tax brackets, rising to 17 percent on hand, families with gross income above $25,000. Travia took the example of a family of four to illustrate his plan. He said that families with gross income of $20,000 or less would pay no additional taxes under his plan. On the other hand, families with gross income between $20,000 and $35,000 would pay higher taxes but less than they would under the governor's 20-percent surcharge plan. Only those with gross incomes totaling more than $35,000 would pay more than under the Rockefeller system.

Adjourn Cases In City Court

Two cases were adjourned in Kingston city court today. One case dealt with a violation of the Conservation Act and the other involved burglary in the third degree.

Both defendants pleaded innocent. William L. Shanks, 44, of 89 South Manor Avenue was arrested at 4:45 a. m. this morning by Kingston police officer Richard Spaulding for carrying a loaded .32 caliber Winchester rifle in his car, a violation of the Conservation Act.

He also was charged with speeding. Spaulding reportedly posted $500 bail and Judge Hubert Richter adjourned his trial until April 2.

Spaulding is represented by Attorney Sidney Schmukler of New York City. Richard D. Deyo, 35, of Kingston, allegedly responded to a summons for his arrest and turned himself in to police headquarters last night.

He is charged with the burglary of Congregation Agudas Achim Synagogue on 24 West Union Street on March 1. Reportedly taken in the third degree burglary charge was a silver collection box containing $635, five bottles of liquor and one bottle of wine valued at $32. He pleaded innocent and his case was adjourned until April 2.

Travia's reasoning was that further increases in this tax would push the cigarette industry into deep financial trouble.

Rockefeller's tax program was built around the proposed 20 per cent income — tax surcharge. The governor also proposed a dime-a-fifth boost in the liquor tax, estimated to yield $15 million, a cent-a-gallon increase in the gasoline tax, worth $21 million, and various business-tax increases totaling $182 million.

Casting his eye over the entire Rockefeller program, Travia told newsmen he saw "certain inequities" regarding the liquor, insurance, bank and utility tax increases. He said his approach would permit reductions totaling $25 million in this area. He promised to detail his recommendations later.

Open to Gas Hike

However, he indicated that he would accept the proposal for a higher gasoline tax.

Even as Travia spoke, it appeared questionable whether the state would move into the new fiscal year Monday with an approved budget.

To meet that possibility, Travia said he had prepared legislation that would permit the state to continue operations at the spending level of the old budget and to pay its workers on that basis.

Under the present tax law, income taxes are levied on a scale ranging upward from 2 per cent on the first $1,000 of annual net income—after all deductions—to 10 per cent on net income beyond $15,000.

Travia suggested that, instead of raising everyone's income taxes by 20 percent, that the state create seven more tax brackets, rising to 17 percent on net income above $29,000. Travia took the example of a family of four to illustrate his plan. He said that families with gross income of $20,000 or less would pay no additional taxes under his plan. On the other hand, families with gross income between $20,000 and $35,000 would pay higher taxes but less than they would under the governor's 20-percent surcharge plan. Only those with gross income totaling more than $35,000 would pay more than under the Rockefeller system.

Artificial Human Cells To Be Grown in Buffalo

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — Two Thursday hat construction of pounds of artificially grown the $300,000 plant will get under human cells would be produced way next month and is scheduled daily in a new two-story building for completion in September that will be constructed this year at the Roswell Park Memorial Institute at Buffalo.

"If the expectations of the new facility are fulfilled," he Gov. Rockefeller announced said, "one more milestone in medical science will have been attained and a major step in man's dream of conquering disease will move nearer to reality."

The cell plant will produce both normal and abnormal human cells which are needed for research in cancer, kidney and heart diseases.

Culture of artificially grown cells starts with harvesting white cells from an ounce or two of blood. They are incubated at body temperature until they begin multiplying, a process that takes 40 to 80 days.

Those not immediately used will be placed in a cell bank where they will hibernate at minus 200 degrees centigrade.

The cells can be kept alive many years in this fashion.

Dr. George Moore, the Health Department's director of public health research, said the estimated two pound output of cells would be five times greater than the production from the original equipment developed at the institute.

The success of automatically grown cells already has proven beneficial to virologists, geneticists and other researchers, the governor said.

"The availability of large quantities will make it possible to cultivate specific cell viruses and to identify anti-viral substances. It also will aid in the study of organ transplantation, vaccines and chromosomes," he added.

The Health Department also announced a round-the-clock service for physicians and dentists who seek prompt and authoritative information on the care of cancer patients.

Distant Uncle
HONOLULU (AP) — When the Richard L. Larson family of Kailua, near Honolulu, took a drive recently along the Kona Coast of Hawaii Island, one of the auto's passengers, Brinton Darlington Cook, 84, of Seattle, was especially interested in Kealahou Bay. Kealahou Bay is the place where British sea Capt. James Cook died in 1779, one year after he discovered the Hawaiian Islands. The Seattle Cook is a direct descendant of a brother of the English explorer. He was visiting his daughter, Mrs. Larson.

But they become confused when he adds: "But you must be prepared to face the legal consequences." They cheer when he says he would like to abolish the draft; but many jeer when he adds: "But not now, with a war going on. I think we should draft by lottery. 'Bobby' Is the U.S. Campus Happening

By JOSEPH E. MOHBAU

IN THE WEST WITH KENNEDY (AP) — "Bobby" is what's happening on campus.

The quadrangle and the basketball court are the forums Robert F. Kennedy has chosen for the launching of his campaign to snatch the Democratic presidential nomination from Lyndon B. Johnson.

By tonight he will have barnstormed through a dozen campuses west of the Mississippi since declaring himself a candidate two weeks ago.

All but one of his formal appearances—as opposed to shopping center, airport and street corner rallies—have been before enthusiastic thousands of students.

And He Responds
They're demanding that he "tell it like it is," and he is responding vigorously, giving some answers they like and some they do not.

Kennedy needs 1,312 delegates when the Democratic National Convention gathers five months hence to nominate a candidate. Few, if any of those delegates are likely to be a college student.

Why the campus, then? There are several reasons, in the New York Democrat's case:

—Since his days as attorney general, in the Cabinet of brother John, he has always had remarkable rapport with young people. He speaks best when he is with them.

—With his candidacy announced out of the blue, it fell upon his staff to generate big crowds fast. The campus was a natural choice.

—Kennedy believes the students, as the most vocal and emotional segment of American society, will play a major role in prodding delegates to break tradition and throw the nomination his way.

—The students' boisterousness and enthusiasm are impressive. He walks around the hall and watches the faces.

The dominant expression is one of hopeful attentiveness to every word and gesture. Their lips are parted, their eyes wide. They have been waiting for something. Maybe this is it.

They cheer when he says he understands those who conscientiously object to serving in Vietnam, and when he says, "If that's what your conscience tells you to do, then you have to do it."

But they become confused when he adds: "But you must be prepared to face the legal consequences."

They cheer when he says he would like to abolish the draft; but many jeer when he adds: "But not now, with a war going on. I think we should draft by lottery. And student deferments should be abolished."

But Robert Francis Kennedy is what they come out to see. To evaluate his effectiveness on campus, an observer does not listen closely to his speeches.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The man who has been a presidential press secretary, a senator, vice president of an airline and co-owner of a Hollywood Discotheque says he wants to be a television star—if he can find the time.

Pierre Salinger, a chubby, cigar-chomping, perpetual motion machine, previews his new television series this April with a one-hour special syndicated to independent stations, "With Salinger."

The show will not begin regular weekly airing until next September.

That's fine with Salinger who doesn't seem to find enough hours in each day anyway.

On a recent afternoon he failed to appear at his office for an interview. Tracked down at the campaign headquarters of Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, D-N.Y., Salinger was dashing from empty room to empty room supervising the arrangement of furniture.

Phones rang constantly. A woman campaign worker would answer, announce a name, look to Salinger who would instantly shake his head negatively or affirmatively depending on the caller.

At one point he eagerly grabbed the receiver. "McNamara!" he said. "Sure I'm back in harness. After all, does a dog eat dog food?"

The return to public life began early this year when Salinger took a leave of absence from his vice presidency at Continental Airlines. His plan was to concentrate on the new television show and to write a political novel.

Then Kennedy decided to seek the Democratic presidential nomination and enlisted the aid of the late President John F. Kennedy's press secretary.

"I'm moving to Washington now to concentrate on the campaign," Salinger said. "My publisher has given me another year to finish the novel."

"But I won't be a delegate to the Democratic convention because of the TV show. If I were a delegate there might be a problem with other delegates asking for equal time."

The show's format, he explained, will be "a balance of serious discussion of today's issues with Americans and people abroad and a look at the world through satire... a serious show laced with entertainment."

The first hour, to be aired on various local channels across the country, features interviews with New York Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller, baseball great Jackie Robinson and presidential aide John Roche. There is also satire presented by The Opposition Party, an improvisational group.

Rockland Dems Pick LBJ Men For Convention

NEW CITY, N.Y. (AP) — The Rockland County Democratic Committee nominated Wednesday night a slate of three national convention delegates and three alternates — all pledged to President Johnson — to appear on the June primary ballot.

The pro-Johnson slate won 250-234 over a coalition slate backing the candidacies of U.S. Sens. Robert F. Kennedy and Eugene J. McCarthy. A spokesman said the Kennedy-McCarthy forces would seek to get on the primary ballot through petition.

In other action the committee endorsed Rep. John Dow for a third term. The vote was 348 for Dow to 123 for his sole opponent, Almon Scott, a Clarkstown undertaker.

President Awaits Report

The Denver Earthquakes: What to Do About Them?

BY FRANK CAREY

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson will receive within a month a report outlining what action, if any, the federal government can take to stop or minimize the mysterious earthquakes that have plagued the Denver, Colo., area for six years.

The Associated Press has learned that the President's chief scientific adviser, Dr. Donald Hornig, is drafting a report on the findings of an investigation begun two years ago. Work on the recommendations, it was accelerated, it was learned, after Hornig received a report from four scientists advancing the theory that there's a 10 to 20 per cent chance of a major quake in the Denver area this year.

Others Dispute Theory

The theory came from a U.S. Geological Survey team, including two specialists in earthquake research. An aide to Hornig said, however, that the theory has been disputed by other advisers involved in the investigation.

The temblors have been occurring ever since the Army dug a 2½-mile deep well 10 miles northeast of Denver and began filling it with liquid wastes from its Rocky Mountain arsenal. The arsenal manufactures nerve gas and other weapons of chemical warfare.

Before the well was dug, the area had been free of measurable earthquakes. Since then, there have been 1,500 temblors, although until last year most of them were so small they were scarcely noticed by the area's residents.

Considerable Debate

There has been considerable debate among scientists as to whether there is any cause-and-effect connection between high-pressure injection of the wastes into the well and the quakes.

President Lyndon B. Johnson

The temblors have continued to do any large-scale pumping, at even though the Army stopped least at present, because it shooting wastes down the well would be tough to prove or disprove in February 1966, after it had proved scientifically that such an dumped 160 million gallons. In-operation was beneficial, even if deed, the three worst quakes of the earthquakes stopped. Also, curbed last year, and one of said Van Poolen, "He who them caused considerable property damage in Denver.

Precisely what Hornig's report to the President will recommend could not be ascertained, but it was learned that one proposed remedy is a suggestion by some scientists that all or most of the waste material be pumped out of the well. Other scientists are opposed, however, contending the pumping might trigger more and bigger quakes.

One of these is H. K. Van Poolen, a consulting engineer commissioned by the Army to explore the feasibility and advisability of pumping out the well. In a report to the Army, and to Hornig, he concluded, "It would be inadvisable to

Could Worsen Things

—It would be inadvisable to Hornig, told the AP that these reports, together with information from other outside experts are still being evaluated.

Sorting Out Opinions

"We'll have to make available to the President," Baer said,

"the best technical advice we can obtain. We are sorting out the opinions and seeing what, if in the area—and whether it any, consensus can be reached, would be beneficial to try to draw large amounts of fluid from the well."

Hopes to Halt Packaging of Imitation Milk

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — Rep. Samuel S. Stratton says he is preparing a bill to halt the packaging of imitation milk in such a way that the substitute "closely resembles milk."

The Amsterdam Democrat told the Northeast Dairy Federation Thursday many consumers inadvertently buy imitation milk in supermarkets because it is displayed beside real milk.

Stratton said he would seek to prevent the similarity in packaging and to bar the displaying of imitation products in the dairy sections of stores.

He also told the dairy officials they could expect approval of a long-sought revision in the cooperative payments provisions of the federal marketing order for New York State.

Members now pay 2½ cents per hundredweight (46.3 quarts) to cooperatives. The funds are used to advance the economic interests of dairymen in the state.

Stratton said Agriculture Secretary Orville Freeman had told him in Washington the cooperatives' request for three to four cents per hundredweight would be granted.

The decision has been sought since August 1965.

Stratton also called for:

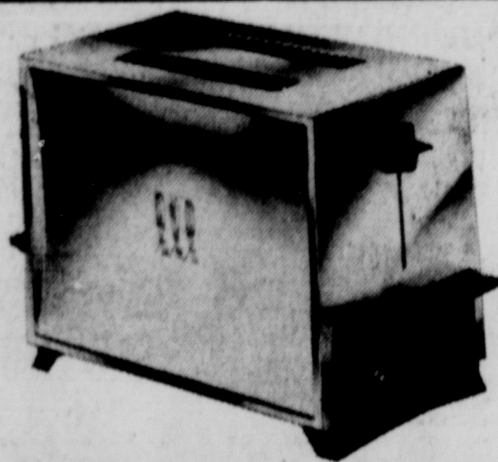

—A thorough overhaul of the formula for milk-pricing in the light of current realities.

—Expansion of dairy organizations and cooperatives to assure dairymen of higher profits.

Work on the recommendations was accelerated, it was learned, after Hornig received a report from four scientists advancing the theory that there's a 10 to 20 per cent chance of a major quake in the Denver area this year.

Others Dispute Theory

The theory came from a U.S. Geological Survey team, including two specialists in earthquake research. An aide to Hornig said, however, that the theory has been disputed by other advisers involved in the investigation.

The temblors have been occurring ever since the Army dug a 2½-mile deep well 10 miles northeast of Denver and began filling it with liquid wastes from its Rocky Mountain arsenal. The arsenal manufactures nerve gas and other weapons of chemical warfare.

Before the well was dug, the area had been free of measurable earthquakes. Since then, there have been 1,500 temblors, although until last year most of them were so small they were scarcely noticed by the area's residents.

Considerable Debate

There has been considerable debate among scientists as to whether there is any cause-and-effect connection between high-pressure injection of the wastes into the well and the quakes.

President Lyndon B. Johnson

The temblors have continued to do any large-scale pumping, at even though the Army stopped least at present, because it shooting wastes down the well would be tough to prove or disprove. In February 1966, after it had proved scientifically that such an dumped 160 million gallons, in-operation was beneficial, even if deed, the three worst quakes occurred last year, and one of said Van Poolen, "He who them caused considerable property damage in Denver.

Precisely what Hornig's report to the President will recommend could not be ascertained, but it was learned that one proposed remedy is a suggestion by some scientists that all or most of the waste material be pumped out of the well. Other scientists are opposed, however, contending the pumping might trigger more and bigger quakes.

One of these is H. K. Van Poolen, a consulting engineer commissioned by the Army to explore the feasibility and advisability of pumping out the well. In a report to the Army, and to Hornig, he concluded, "It would be inadvisable to Hornig, told the AP that these reports, together with information from other outside experts are still being evaluated. Sorting Out Opinions "We'll have to make available to the President," Baer said,

Hopes to Halt Packaging of Imitation Milk

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) —

Rep. Samuel S. Stratton says he is preparing a bill to halt the packaging of imitation milk in such a way that the substitute "closely resembles milk."

The Amsterdam Democrat told the Northeast Dairy Federation Thursday many consumers inadvertently buy imitation milk in supermarkets because it is displayed beside real milk.

Stratton said he would seek to prevent the similarity in packaging and to bar the displaying of imitation products in the dairy sections of stores.

He also told the dairy officials they could expect approval of a long-sought revision in the cooperative - payments provisions the best technical advice we can obtain. We are sorting out the opinions and seeing what, if any, consensus can be reached. "There's still disagreement among the experts, for example, as to how likely is the occurrence of a major earthquake in the area—and whether it would be beneficial to try to draw large amounts of fluid from the well."

of the federal marketing order for New York State. Members now pay 2½ cents per hundredweight (46.3 quarts) to cooperatives. The funds are used to advance the economic interests of dairymen in the state.

Stratton said Agriculture Secretary Orville Freeman had told him in Washington the cooperatives' request for three to four cents per hundredweight would be granted.

The decision has been sought since August 1965.

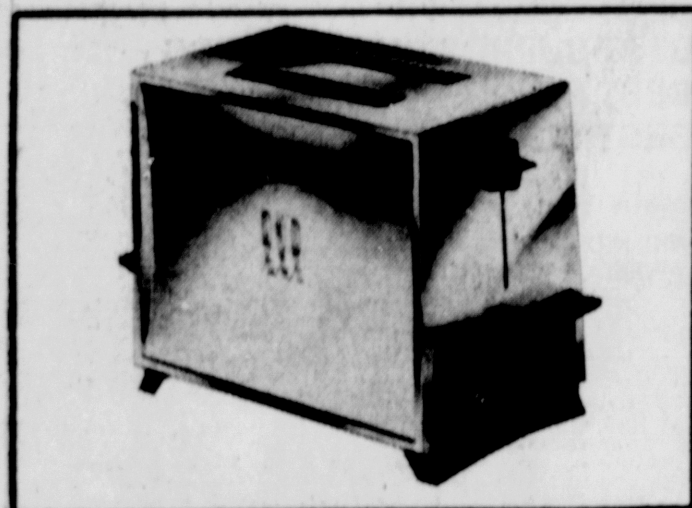

Stratton also called for: "A thorough overhaul of the formula for milk-pricing in the light of current realities."

—Expansion of dairy organizations and cooperatives to assure dairymen of higher profits.

S-A: New Viet Service

The Salvation Army is starting a specific new service for Vietnam refugees, it was announced today by Commissioner Samuel Hepburn, U. S. A. National Commander, at his headquarters, 120 West 14th Street, New York.

Commissioner Hepburn said at the request of the Vietnamese Consulate in Hong Kong, "The Salvation Army Refugee and Rehabilitation Program" is expected to be in progress by the end of March.

Commissioner Hepburn said Lt.-Colonel Leonard Adams, Assistant Field Secretary of the Army's Western Territory, San Francisco, had been "loaned to The Salvation Army National Headquarters for temporary assignment as executive director" of the project.

The refugee program has the endorsement of General Frederick Cutts, of London, England, International Leader of The Salvation Army and will be funded by The Salvation Army in the United States with the support of a philanthropic foundation.

In an interview in New York, Colonel Adams said he planned to go to Hong Kong immediately to interview project team members that had been recruited by Lt.-Colonel John Nelson, The Salvation Army's commanding officer in Hong Kong.

As Executive director of the general rehabilitation program with Vietnamese homeless refugees, Colonel Adams will have for his initial team a group of six civilians including doctors, nurses and technicians.

Working with other groups The Salvation Army, he said, will institute a program that will provide feeding, housing, clothing, medical attention and the setting up of schools.

As the work expands, The Salvation Army visualizes the organization of several follow-up teams to implement the work in the Army's traditional ministry of meeting the needs of people at the point of need, Colonel Adams said. "The program will hinge on the needs and desires of the people."

Colonel Adams said he would be the organizer of the work and team and that the Vietnam assignment will "Probably be the toughest" he has had since he left his native England in 1937 for Salvation Army duty in the Far East.

During the Japanese occupation of Canton, China, Colonel Adams was the manager of a refugee camp and later took charge of a boy's vocational center before proceeding to Burma where he was evacuated to Chungking following the Japanese occupation in 1941. On the cessation of hostilities in 1945, Colonel Adams returned to Hong Kong. He was assigned to England in 1947 and transferred to the west coast of the United States in 1949.

Colonel and Mrs. Adams, the former Ruby I. Palm, are the parents of two sons. Private First Class Kenneth Adams, 21, on duty with the U.S. Army in Frankfurt, Germany, and Greg Adams, 16, a high school student and a member of the "Youth of America Orchestra" in San Francisco.

Make Spring Cleaning Decision Time

To keep or not to keep: that is the question.

Every homemaker asks it of herself dozens of times during spring cleaning as she rummages through everything from old magazines and newspapers to medicines, from broken furniture to dried paint in cans, from holiday decorations to worn out clothes.

Now that warm weather days are in the offing and it is time for spring cleaning, the Council on Family Health offers Mom some suggestions for determining what to keep and what to discard, and how to do it cleanly and safely.

First, says the Council, make your decisions against these guidelines: Is it clutter or rubbish? Is it useless, worthless, unrecyclable, purposeless, needless? Most important, is it dangerous or potentially a cause of accidental injury to any member of the family?

Once you have made up your mind to get rid of it, says the Council, be ruthless. Otherwise it will be there next spring, along with more accumulated clutter.

The Council, a non-profit organization sponsored as a public service by members of the drug industry to promote home safety and family health, points out that attics and basements can become storehouses for old boxes, magazines, newspapers and similar flammable objects which become a fire hazard.

Accumulations of paint and oil-soaked rags, flammable holiday decorations, old curtains, pieces of carpeting, old and broken toys, are all potential feeders of fires and should be discarded.

Clear your closets of old clothes which are not likely to be worn again. They take up valuable storage space and add to household clutter.

When giving the medicine cabinet its periodic spring cleaning, says the Council, be methodical.

1. Do not permit children in the room during the cleaning. Keep them busy with toys nearby.
2. Remove everything from the cabinet to a tray or basket while you clean the shelves and interior.

3. Check each bottle, tube jar, vial, box or package for defects or damaged labels, whether they contain medicine, cosmetics or grooming products.
4. Throw out defective containers, those with damaged or missing labels, and leftover prescription medicines, unless your doctor has specifically advised medication, and medication that has changed color, composition or odor.

5. Pills, capsules and liquid medicines should be flushed away. The empty containers should be washed so no residue is left. Containers which cannot be burned with the trash should be put in tightly covered trash cans so children cannot get into them.

Do Women Drivers Dress to Kill?

LONDON (AP) — A road safety officer claims the modern femme fatale is the woman driver who wears a long-line bra and tight corset.

"She is dressed to kill," says Major Frederick Cook of Bourne, a south coast resort.

And he launched an appeal for safer clothes for women drivers. Drawing on 40 years driving experience, the major warned:

"When women drivers wear a long-line bra and step-in corset, watch out for trouble."

"They restrict the breathing and make a woman hot and uncomfortable."

The major, who explained his findings were the logical and obvious result of standing at street corners watching women drivers, said:

"She spends her time trying to relieve the discomfort. She takes her hand off the wheel and yanks at the offending garment."

"When they refuse to budge she becomes irritable, her attention wanders and to escape the torture she puts her foot down and more than likely has an accident."

Major Cook also condemned dresses with wide sleeves, high-heeled shoes, narrow dresses, miniskirts which ride up and nylon gloves which slip.

"I suppose the ideal outfit would be nothing at all," he added, conceding, "that might distract other drivers."

Anne Hope wrote in the Sun newspaper that she put the major's views to Britain's best-known woman rally driver, Pat Moss-Carlsson, who piloted an Italian Lancia in this year's Monte Carlo rally and who used to drive for Saab of Sweden.

"Few girls are so daft as to wear uncomfortable clothes when motoring," she replied.

"Look at me, I can't bear being restricted in a rally."

"I like either an old bra or one of the new elasticated things. If I feel restricted I undo the hooks and eyes."

"A tight corset?—The days of the tight corset are gone."

"High heels?—Out for driving. I always keep a pair of flat shoes in the car. Don't you?"

Sergio-DeCicco Nuptials Told

Miss Pierina Sergio, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Sergio, 24 Cordis Street, Kingston, was married to Ralph A. DeCicco, son of Mr. and Mrs. Salvatore DeCicco, 621 Kiersted Avenue, Kingston, on Sunday, March 24, in St. Mary's Church, Kingston.

The Rev. Edward I. Farrelly officiated at the double ring ceremony and celebrated the Nuptial Mass. Mrs. Peter Mancuso sang traditional wedding selections, accompanied at the organ by Peter Mancuso. The family pews were marked with white satin bows.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore an A-line gown of bangaline in the empire fashion. The bodice, sleeves and train were enhanced with appliques of Venice lace. Her silk illusion veil was shirred to a crown of waxed orange blossoms. She carried a cascade bouquet of white daisies with ivy and centered with a white orchid corsage and daisies.

Miss Susan Sergio, Kingston, was maid of honor for her sister. She wore an aquamarine linen floor length gown fashioned with a high rolled neckline and long sleeves, cuffed at the wrists. She wore daisies in her hair and carried a round bouquet of white and turquoise daisies with a white ribbon.

Attendants were Frances Sergio, Kingston, sister of the bride; Mrs. Silvana Dudek, Saugerties; Carla DeCicco, Kingston; both sisters of the bridegroom; Miss Debbie DeCicco, cousin of the bridegroom; and

by VIVIAN NBROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

Carol White, 24, young British actress, is so unimpressed with her own success that her husband was moved to say to her at a New York theater opening:

"For heavens sake, don't look now. You'll pass out. You're rubbing elbows with Paul Newman."

She was so shocked, she couldn't look up... you know what that could do to a girl, she says.

Steve McQueen could have the same effect on her. And Marlon Brando—well, there's no sense talking about it, she says, laughing. She likes he-man types.

"But I also like the way they put out as actors. They make you aware of them," says pretty blonde Carol.

There is some talk that Carol, who is in a top-demand position right now, will make a movie in the United States. She is on her first trip to America and it was timed to coincide with a movie, "Poor Cow," in which she co-stars with Terrence Stamp.

She has been in show business 11 years, although she didn't get in by the usual formula—a trip to London and an agent, who sends you to producers and directors. At 11, Carol was at "stage school" and the agent there got her auditions, interviews, TV commercials and bit parts. It is easier to get into the movies in Britain than it is in the United States, she says.

In spite of having played a few naughty, controversial roles, Carol is a real homebody. She loves her husband, Michael King, 30, a pop singer in a "group" who travels with her and their two children, Sean 5, and Stevie 2, who is in her current movie.

Her husband's two brothers in the musical group enjoy a vacation occasionally—one writes stories, the other writes music, she says, so when they must travel, the group takes a respite. Michael has spent most of his leisure time in a Fifth Avenue toy store, ostensibly because "the children enjoy it," she says with a grin.

They've just bought a lovely house on the outskirts of London. But they won't go "London." In England, new wealth is not used that way, she explains.

There is no rivalry to have the best in your new affluent set. You keep your old friends and you don't try to impress anyone.

She has made films with Peter Sellers and has one coming out soon with Orson Wells. She has a five-film contract and "options everywhere."

"My family are very cockney English," she says, revealing that she is at the point where it makes no difference to her. She once fretted that she had a cockney accent and was afraid to talk to people.

"I'm so happy that Americans are so pleasant. Everyone told me they would be difficult," she says.

They were afforded these honors as a result of having compiled the two highest averages for the first three and one-half years of high school preparation.

JoAnne, valedictorian, in addition to her outstanding academic achievements has also been active in many varied extra-curricular activities. JoAnne has been a member of the National Honor Society for two years and is secretary this year. She was a member of the student council during her junior and senior year and is also secretary of this organization. The has been a cheerleader for three years and is varsity captain this year. She was a member of the Girl's Athletic Association for three years and was on the council during her junior and senior year. She has been active in school intramurals for four years and played on girl's varsity basketball, hockey and softball teams. In her junior year she attended the Citizenship Conference at Syracuse University and was a junior prom attendant. She is presently a member of the Senior Seminar and was recently honored by the Poughkeepsie Exchange Club as the outstanding student-citizen in the class of 1968. JoAnne is a recipient of a New York State Regents Scholarship and plans to attend Ithaca College next year. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John McElhenney, 9 Lookout Avenue, New Paltz.

Q—I have high blood pressure and am taking Mebaral which keeps my pressure around 168/90. I also take Placidyl to help me sleep. Is it harmful to take these drugs continually?

A—Mebaral is a barbiturate. Both drugs are habit-forming.

sure down? Could high blood pressure affect my equilibrium?

A—This combination of methyldopa and hydrochlorothiazide is an effective remedy for hypertension. A sudden rise or fall in your blood pressure may cause a transient loss of equilibrium. More persistent loss of balance is usually due to some disease of the inner ear, often associated with hardening of the arteries.

Q—I am taking Vasodilan and Dilantin for poor circulation in the brain. Could these drugs cause drowsiness?

A—These drugs would be more likely to have the opposite effect. Your drowsiness may be a result of your circulatory disease.

Q—My son is taking Maolate for muscle pain. Does it have any bad side effects? Is liver extract a form of iron?

A—Chlorphenesin carbamate (Maolate) may cause drowsiness, dizziness, nausea, insomnia and headache. It is more expensive than aspirin but is not believed to be any more effective in relieving pain.

Although whole liver contains iron, liver extract is not a good source of this element. Liver extract and iron are both used in combating some forms of anemia.

Make Spring Cleaning Decision Time

To keep or not to keep: that is the question.

Every homemaker asks it of herself dozens of times during spring cleaning as she rummages through everything from old magazines and newspapers to medicines from broken furniture to dried paint in cans, from holiday decorations to worn out clothes.

Now that warm weather days are in the offing and it is time for spring cleaning, the Council on Family Health offers Mom some suggestions for determining what to keep and what to discard, and how to do it cleanly and safely.

First, says the Council, make your decisions against these guidelines: Is it clutter or rubbish? Is it useless, worthless, unrecyclable, purposeless, needless? Most important, is it dangerous or potentially a cause of accidental injury to any member of the family.

Once you have made up your mind to get rid of it, says the Council, be ruthless. Otherwise it will be there next spring, along with more accumulated clutter.

The Council, a non-profit organization sponsored as a public service by members of the drug industry to promote home safety and family health, points out that attics and basements can become storehouses for old boxes, magazines, newspapers and similar flammable objects which become a fire hazard. Accumulations of paint and oil-soaked rags, flammable holiday decorations, old curtains, pieces of carpeting, old and broken toys, are all potential feeders of fires and should be discarded.

Clear your closets of old clothes which are not likely to be worn again. They take up valuable storage space and add to household clutter.

When giving the medicine cabinet its periodic spring cleaning, says the Council, be methodical.

1. Do not permit children in the room during the cleaning. Keep them busy with toys nearby.

2. Remove everything from the cabinet to a tray or basket while you clean the shelves and interior.

3. Check each bottle, tube jar, vial, box or package for defects or damaged labels, whether they contain medicine, cosmetics or grooming products.

4. Throw out defective containers, those with damaged or missing labels, and leftover prescription medicines, unless your doctor has specifically advised medication, and medication that has changed color, composition or odor.

5. Pills, capsules and liquid medicines should be flushed away. The empty containers should be washed so no residue is left. Containers which cannot be burned with the trash should be put in tightly covered trash cans so children cannot get into them.

Do Women Drivers Dress to Kill?

LONDON (AP) — A road safety officer claims the modern femme fatale is the woman driver who wears a long-line bra and tight corset.

"She is dressed to kill," says Major Frederick Cook of Bournemouth, a south coast resort.

And he launched an appeal for safer clothes for women drivers.

Drawing on 40 years driving experience, the major warned:

"When women drivers wear a long-line bra and step-in corset, watch out for trouble."

"They restrict the breathing and make a woman hot and uncomfortable."

The major, who explained his findings were the logical and obvious result of standing at street corners watching women drivers, said:

"She spends her time trying to relieve the discomfort. She takes her hand or hands off the wheel and yanks at the offending garment."

"When they refuse to budge she becomes irritable, her attention wanders and to escape the torture she puts her foot down and more than likely has an accident."

Major Cook also condemned dresses with wide sleeves, high-heeled shoes, narrow dresses,

miniskirts which ride up and nylon gloves which slip.

"I suppose the ideal outfit would be nothing at all," he added, conceding, "that might distract other drivers."

Anne Hope wrote in the Sun newspaper that she put the major's views to Britain's best-known woman rally driver, Pat Moss-Carlson, who piloted an Italian Landi in this year's Monte Carlo rally and who used to drive for Saab of Sweden.

"Few girls are so daft as to wear uncomfortable clothes when motoring," she replied.

"Look at me. I can't bear being restricted in a rally. It's like either an old bra or one of the new elasticated things. If I feel restricted I undo the hooks and eyes."

"A tight corset?—The days of the tight corset are gone. High heels?—Out for driving. I always keep a pair of flaties in the car. Don't you?"

(Freeman Sports Staff)

"The game of basketball hasn't really changed at all—the difference today is that the players are better," said Clair Bee, one of basketball's biggest names, in a speech at Rondout Valley High School last night.

Bee, guest speaker at the Gander's dinner in recognition of the school's UCAL cage champs, went on to explain what he thought made today's player better.

"The player today, and this goes all the way down the line right to school boys like those right here at Rondout, is better conditioned and shoots, jumps and trains better than players in the past—the result, in most cases, more concentration on offense. In reverse, the game today has less defense and weaker passing," the recently Inducted Basketball Hall of Famer said.

One of basketball's renowned names, Bee, in addition to his speaking role, helped present trophies to award winning Rondout athletes.

Honor Four Players

Gordy Taylor won the award for best free throw percentage and for being the team and league's top scorer. Pete Koola took home the field goal percentage trophy. Frank Samms was top rebounder and John Meehan, Jr., had the most assists.

Taylor and Koola were singled out for being named to the All-UCAL first team; and Meehan, Jr. and Samms were honored for making the second team.

The team also presented coach John Meehan, Sr., with a scroll to show their appreciation for his coaching and guidance in bringing the team to the title.

Bee tried to compare Rondout's championship team to the great teams he had while coaching at LIU. He felt, "The advent of the big man has brought Kutch's Sports Academy in Monticello added. "Witness the University of Houston's loss," he continued. "That team had power, but in a tremendously meaningful game, Houston like most teams, tended to be reluctant to take a quick shot. All season they took the quick shot, made it, and overpowered the opposition," he said.

"When they went to looking for the better shot, they found they couldn't pass the ball—forcing very costly turnovers that UCLA converted time after time. 'All year,' he added after the program was over, 'Houston didn't have to pass or defend. When forced to, they didn't know how. UCLA did and won' Bee said.

He observed some time ago that Houston didn't have these abilities. At that time he confided to friends that Houston was not a team good enough to be a national champion.

"The team (Houston) was not an all-around club. All it could do was run and shoot. Without passing or defense, it wasn't well-rounded or consistent," he pointed out.

In assessing Rondout's championship formula — especially coming back after losing its first two league games, Bee attributed the success to desire.

He likened RV with any championship calibre team by saying, "A champ has to have desire."

At an informal post-ceremonies talk, Bee said, "In Houston's case, they didn't lack desire, they just met a better team. In the case where both teams are equal in talent, the team with the most desire wins—Houston was just not UCLA's equal in all-around talent," Bee stated.

To the audience he brought out that Houston defeated UCLA in the Astrodome two months earlier. He felt that UCLA and Lew Alcindor, its 7-foot-11 center, had three factors against it—Alcindor's eye injury, the awe that must come in playing before the largest crowd to witness a basketball game (50,000) and the effect of playing before strange fans on the road.

"A friendly home crowd plays a great role in the outcome of a game," Bee declared.

Bee holds Alcindor in great regard, and is still distraught over Alcindor's and several other athletes' desires not to compete in the upcoming Olympics.

"I think they'll have a change of mind and heart. I believe they will compete, no matter what they say now," he said as he left the Rondout cafeteria at the conclusion of the program.

Baseball Roundup

Kaat's Elbow Pains Big Blow to Twins

By DICK COUCH

Associated Press Sports Writer
The California Angels and Baltimore Orioles have had their wings clipped but Jim Kaat's elbow trouble has thrown the Minnesota Twins for a bigger loss.

San Francisco unleashed a 22-hit barrage against four California pitchers Thursday and rolled to an 18-3 exhibition baseball triumph over the Angels at Phoenix, Ariz.

The Orioles were shut out for the second time in a row, bowing 2-0 to Washington at Miami, Fla., as Camilo Pascual and Bill Denney combined for a five-hit

Kaat, Minnesota's southpaw pitching ace, flew from Orlando, Fla., to the Twin Cities Thursday night to being a series of X-ray treatments on his ailing left elbow.

Elsewhere on the exhibition schedule, St. Louis trimmed Oakland 3-1, Cincinnati nipped Detroit 4-3 in 14 innings, Pittsburgh topped Houston 3-1, Los Angeles drubbed the Chicago White Sox 11-4, the New York Yankees downed the New York Mets 5-1, the Chicago Cubs edged Cleveland 5-3 and Philadelphia shaded Atlanta 4-2.

Jim Davenport lashed four hits, including a triple, as the Giants cuffed Ricky Clark for eight runs and 14 hits in five innings and completed the assault against Minnie Rojas, Jack Hamilton and Jim Weaver.

Pascual, who allowed four hits in six innings, and Denney hurled the Senators to their 12th victory in 17 spring starts. The Orioles have scored just one unearned run in the last 30 innings.

Kaat, who ruptured a muscle in his elbow at Boston last Sept. 30, could be sidelined for some time because of an irritated nerve. "We expect the X-ray treatments to be helpful," said Dr. Harvey O'Phelan, the Twins' team physician. "No one really knows."

"Our present plan is to put him on the disabled list at the start of the season."

Warriors, Lakers in Good Spot

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The San Francisco Warriors and Los Angeles Lakers will be looking to stretch their National Basketball Association playoff advantage to 3-1 tonight. Meanwhile, the Minnesota Muskies will try to wrap up their semifinal victory over Kentucky in the American Basketball Association.

The Warriors, surprisingly a game up on the St. Louis Hawks in the NBA's Western Division playoffs, entertain the Hawks in the Lakers, not surprisingly ahead of the Chicago Bulls 2-1 in the West's other playoff, meet the Bulls in Chicago.

The Muskies can end their series with Kentucky in the ABA's Eastern Division with another victory. Minnesota is ahead 2-1 and the semifinals in the ABA are best-of-5. In the NBA, it's best-of-7.

In the only pro basketball playoff action Thursday night, the Boston Celtics evened their series with the Detroit Pistons a two games each by winning 135-110 at Detroit.

The Warriors' lead over the Hawks is even more surprising for the fact that it was gained without the services of Nate Thurmond, the big center who is out with injuries, and several other key players.

Paul Silas of the Hawks, admitting the Warriors are "better than we expected," says he is "confident the Hawks will come back." St. Louis beat San Francisco in seven of their eight meetings during the regular season.

Bill Russell sparked a third-quarter rally, bringing the Celtics past the Pistons, who were threatening to continue their newly found mastery over Boston. Detroit led 60-55 at the half, but Russell led the Celtics to an 80-point second half.

John Havlicek had 35 points for Boston while Dave Bing led Detroit with 26. The series resumes Sunday in Boston.

Latour New AD

LEWISBURG, Pa. (AP) — Bucknell University announced the appointment today of Robert A. Latour as director of athletics and physical education.

Ed Williams of Rosendale would like to add one more event to that list—the biathlon.

Often confused with the 10-sport decathlon and the five-sport pentathlon, the biathlon comprises just two sports—cross-country (Nordic) skiing and rifle.

The biathlon requires 20 kilometers (12.5 miles) of skiing with four stops during the course to shoot five rounds (each time) of .308 shells at 164 yards.

The entire course is traversed with the 13-pound rifle strapped to the competitor's back. Average race time is 1 hour, 15 minutes. "Picture if you can, that weight, that distance, that time, all combined," Williams said.

Two Years in Army

"After getting my bachelor's at Dartmouth, I spent two years in the Army. I put in a year at Tuck after leaving the Army. In service, I was assigned to the biathlon team and really progressed under Army tutelage. After the year at Tuck, I decided to gamble and instead of continuing, took a year off to train in hopes of making the Olympic team. It was really a gamble, since no civilian had ever made the team before," Williams said.

Williams began a summer training program—Pointing to the goal of being the first non-army man to make the U. S. team.

The first exercise was cross-country running—three times a day he ran. On every other day, he would lift weights, and on alternate days, made a 120-mile drive to Belleayre Mountain in Highmount, so he could hike.

The Belleayre hikes lasted two- and a-half hours, and strapped to his back was a pack filled with sand—to simulate biathlon conditions.

The training paid off as Williams made the team—finishing third in the olympic trials. These also serve as the U. S. championships, thus Williams was third best in America.

27th In Olympics

In the Olympics, the first American finished 27th. Williams was way down the list after experiencing some trouble.

Hampered by a reinjury to some damaged cartilage in one knee, Williams was unable to get in as much running as he should have had. He faces possible surgery on the knee, yet makes no excuses with it. "It cut down on the amount of road work I was able to do, but it had no effect on my performance in Grenoble," he declared.

On America's finish he said, "We're way behind the Finns, the Norwegians and the Swedes. Over there, the best athletes in the country become biathletes. Here, biathletes are just average people."

"In these countries, the Joe DiMaggio's are biathletes. Here, the Joe DiMaggio's go into other sports. I don't think we'll ever really beat them out," Williams said.

The winning time in the 1964 Olympics was bettered by many 1968 finishers. "Even with the improvement, the U. S. could do no better than 27th—simply because as we improve, so do the others," he said.

The future of Ed Williams... the leg injury helped in making a decision to end competing. Instead, Williams will work at his family's hotel in Rosendale, return in the fall for completion of his master's, then help younger skiers through his membership in the Rosendale Nordic Ski Club.

No More Olympics

"I really liked it in Grenoble, but if I go to another Olympics, it won't be as a participant—the leg took care of that," Williams continued.

"It was a great deal of pleasure meeting the best athletes in the world. With all the language differences, we always could communicate somehow," he said.

Williams would like very much to see the Olympics again, but this time as a spectator. "I just got an inkling of the frustration we were subjected to. It was the idealistic approach of Avery Brundage's olympic committee and its stress on amateur status," Williams stated.

Ed Williams at Home

As an observer, maybe I can make it tougher than it all see clearer and maybe truly ready is. "If you don't think Nordic skiing and the biathlon are we had to face. The sport itself, the pressure of the Olympic, just look at the Oslo, Norway Holmenkollen, a 32 mile race, 97 started—56 finished a toll," he added. "Why I wished," he said in closing.

Basketball Hasn't Changed: Players Much Better --- Bee

By MIKE HELFNER (Freeman Sports Staff)

"The game of basketball hasn't really changed at all—the difference today is that the players are better," said Clair Bee, one of basketball's biggest names, in a speech at Rondout Valley High School last night.

Bee, guest speaker at the Gander's dinner in recognition of the school's UCAL cage champs, went on to explain what he thought made today's player better.

"The player today, and this goes all the way down the line right to school boys like those right here at Rondout, is better conditioned and shoots, jumps and trains better than players in the past—the result, in most cases, more concentration on offense. In reverse, the game today has less defense and weaker passing," the recently Inducted Basketball Hall of Famer said.

One of basketball's renowned names, Bee, in addition to his speaking role, helped present trophies to award winning Rondout athletes.

Honor Four Players

Gordy Taylor won the award for best free throw percentage and for being the team and league's top scorer. Pete Koola took home the field goal percentage trophy. Frank Samms was top rebounder and John Meehan, Jr., had the most assists.

Taylor and Koola were singled out for being named to the All-UCAL first team and Meehan, Jr. and Samms were honored for making the second team.

The team also presented coach John Meehan, Sr., with a scroll to show their appreciation for his coaching and guidance in bringing the team to the title.

Bee tried to compare Rondout's championship team to the great teams he had while coaching at LIU. He felt, "The advent of the big man has brought about the better percentage shot—an adjustment in the game rather than a change—and now everyone is using it (the big man) to good advantage, including Rondout," he said.

Recalls LIU Years He recounted his great years as a coach at LIU, Rider College and with the original Baltimore Bullets. During those days, he could put four shooters and one big man on the floor for today's game, with the larger number of skillful, speedy and agile bigger man, is wide open with team's generating a tremendous amount of "Power," Bee said.

Kutcher's Sports Academy in Monticello added. "Witness the University of Houston's loss," he continued. "That team had power, but in a tremendously meaningful game, Houston like most teams, tended to be reluctant to take a quick shot. All season they took the quick shot, made it, and overpowered the opposition," he said.

"When they went to looking for the better shot, they found and win. 'Today's game, with the larger number of skillful, speedy and agile bigger man, is wide open with team's generating a tremendous amount of "Power," Bee said.

Kaat's Elbow Pains Big Blow to Twins

By DICK COUCH Associated Press Sports Writer

The California Angels and Baltimore Orioles have had their wings clipped but Jim Kaat's elbow trouble has thrown the Minnesota Twins for a bigger loss.

San Francisco unleashed a 22-hit barrage against four California pitchers Thursday and rolled to an 18-3 exhibition baseball triumph over the Angels at Phoenix, Ariz.

The Orioles were shut out for the second time in a row, bowing 2-0 to Washington at Miami, Fla., as Camilo Pascual and Bill Denney combined for a five-hit

Kaat, Minnesota's southpaw pitching ace, flew from Orlando, Fla., to the Twin Cities Thursday night to being a series of X-ray treatments on his ailing left elbow.

Elsewhere on the exhibition schedule, St. Louis trimmed Oakland 3-1, Cincinnati nipped Detroit 4-3 in 14 innings, Pittsburgh topped Houston 3-1, Los Angeles drubbed the Chicago White Sox 11-4, the New York Yankees downed the New York Mets 5-1, the Chicago Cubs edged Cleveland 5-3 and Philadelphia shaded Atlanta 4-2.

Jim Davenport lashed four hits, including a triple, as the Giants cuffed Ricky Clark for eight runs and 14 hits in five innings and completed the assault against Minnie Rojas, Jack Hamilton and Jim Weaver.

Pascual, who allowed four hits in six innings, and Denney hurled the Senators to their 12th victory in 17 spring starts. The Orioles have scored just one unearned run in the last 30 innings.

Kaat, who ruptured a muscle in his elbow at Boston last Sept. lies in his bed at Clearwater, Fla., could be sidelined for some time because of an irritated nerve. "We expect the X-ray treatments to be helpful," said Dr. Harvey O'Phelan, the Twins' team physician. "No one really knows. Our present plan is to put him on the disabled list at the start of the season."

Another ailing player, Atlanta outfielder Rico Carty, is undergoing tests in a Lantana, Fla., hospital to determine if he has tuberculosis. He was reported "feeling fine and walking around" Thursday but asked that details of his confinement not be released.

Lou Brock socked a run-scoring triple and tallied on a throwing error by shortstop Ted Kubiak, giving the Cardinals the edge at Bradenton, Fla. Nelson Briles stopped the A's on five hits over the first seven innings. At Tampa, Fla., the Reds pushed over the winning run on Don Wert's bases-loaded error in the 14th and matched St. Louis' 13-6 exhibition mark.

know how. UCLA did and won," Bee said.

He observed some time ago that Houston didn't have these abilities. At that time he confided to friends that Houston was not a team good enough to be a national champion.

"The team (Houston) was not an all-around club. All it could do was run and shoot. Without passing or defense, it wasn't well-rounded or consistent," he pointed out.

In assessing Rondout's championship formula—especially coming back after losing its first two league games, Bee attributed the success to desire.

He likened RV with any championship calibre team by saying, "A clump has to have desire."

At an informal post-ceremonies talk, Bee said, "In Houston's case, they didn't lack desire, they just met a better team. In the case where both teams are equal in talent, the team with the most desire wins—Houston was just not UCLA's equal in all-around talent," Bee stated.

To the audience he brought out that Houston defeated UCLA in the Astrodome two months earlier. He felt that UCLA and Lew Alcindor, its 7-foot-1½ center, had three factors against it—Alcindor's eye injury, the awe that must come in playing before the largest crowd to witness a basketball game (50,000) and the effect of playing before strange fans on the road.

"A friendly home crowd plays a great role in the outcome of a game," Bee declared.

Bee holds Alcindor in great regard, and is still distraught over Alcindor's and several other athletes desires not to compete in the upcoming Olympics.

"I think they'll have a change of mind and heart. I believe they will compete, no matter what they say now," he said as he left the Rondout cafeteria at the conclusion of the program.

Despite the understandable concern for Mike Ferraro's future as a baseball player, the early detection of his eye ailment may prove a blessing in the long run.

While medical authorities point out he will have to live with it for the rest of his life, it is controllable and medics are cautiously optimistic that it will not seriously interfere with his career.

It is much better for Mike's future to have discovered the ailment now rather than later when declining eyesight, perhaps completely unknown to him, would seriously jeopardize his career—or terminate it completely.

Now, with daily medication, his eyesight figures to be constant, perhaps even improved and that should make him a better ballplayer.

It is ironic that Ferraro was able to have his best spring training yet despite the insidious presence of the ailment. He was in the thick of the battle for third base with Bobby Cox when a routine eye examination changed the course of his life.

I am sure that all sports fans join with me in wishing Mike Ferraro a long and successful major league career, despite what happened on Wednesday.

SAM SNEAD'S ADVICE: Veteran Sam Snead, the sweetest 55-year-old swinger in the land has some sound advice for the over-40 golfer.

Snead sees no reason for your game to deteriorate because you reach middle age. He suggests (1) a little lighter club with a more flexible shaft, (2) make sure your irons light straight to the ground (3) use a softer golf ball of the 80 to 85 compression, (4) practice your chipping and putting, (5) inspect your chip shots from the down side of the intended line of flight in order to get the full view of the terrain and (6) learn to chip with one set club.

Sam uses the 6-iron as his principal chipping weapon. All this sounds pretty good to this better-than-55 duffer!

SAUGERTIES BOWLING ASSOCIATION will enshrine thirteen present and past village tenpin stars in its first Hall of Fame ceremonies Saturday night at Elmer's Inn.

Posthumous recognition goes to Bill Coons, Larry Campanella, Charles Riccardi, Jim Christiana and Joe Huber.

For Schlenker it will be his second Hall of Fame. He was named to the baseball shrine some time ago. It shapes up like a nice affair and we look forward to meeting the Olympians.

Daily chatter by Jerry Coleman and Phil Rizzuto of the Yankees broadcasting team about the "new Yankees" with emphasis on speed, hit and run, steals, et cetera leads us to believe the bomb-less Bronx Bombers may even try to steal first base this season.

Charge El Got $5,000 Pin Money

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Mavericks of the young American Basketball Association charged Thursday that the San Diego Rockets of the NBA slipped "at least $5,000" to University of Houston superstar Elvin Hayes while he still was playing college ball.

The 6-9½ Hayes, college player of the year, signed with San Diego of the National Basketball Association Wednesday for an estimated $440,000 over four years.

Hayes said he would hold a news conference today.

T. C. Morrow, president of the Mavericks, held a news conference Thursday to declare — among other things — "all-out war" against the NBA over the Hayes signing.

Morrow said the Mavericks still would give Hayes $750,000 for three years.

Morrow said at least $5,000 went to Hayes from the Rockets 30 days ago.

Both Walter Kennedy, commissioner of the NBA, and Rockets president Robert Breitbard denied any such payment.

Hayes was contacted in Schenectady, N.Y., Thursday night and withheld any comment, save to say he would hold a news conference this afternoon.

Rojas Rallies, Beats Higgins

LOS ANGELES (AP) — California's Raul Rojas rallied in two violent rounds, the 12th and 15th, and won a unanimous decision over Enrique Higgins of Colombia Thursday night to win the World Boxing Association featherweight championship.

Rojas, 126, San Pedro, Calif., had Higgins, 125½, Bogota, Colombia, on the verge of a knockout in the two crucial rounds before a capacity crowd of 10,400 at the Olympic Auditorium—a crowd which paid $64,381.

The decision was widely acclaimed by the partisan Rojas following but there were those who felt that Higgins, a master at jabbing and boxing had earned the decision.

While the WBA, which includes California, sanctioned the fight, to fill the vacancy caused when Mexico's Vicente Saldivar retired last October, there are other areas in the world which did not extend the recognition.

Referee Dick Young scored it 11-6, judge John Thomas had it 10-5 and judge George Latka scored 10-6. California's scoring is one or more points to the winner of a round, none for the loser and none for an even round. The Associated Press scored it 8-6 for Higgins.

The victory was the 34th for Rojas. His only defeat was a 15-round knockout by Saldivar in Los Angeles, May 7, 1965. It was the third defeat in 33 fights for Higgins.

Killy Has Casual Approach To World Ski Cup Laurels

ROSSLAND, B.C. (AP) — champion, fell and did not finish the race over two tough courses. Miss Greene wrenched her right ankle.

The U.S. women's team Thursday lost Cathy Nagel, 19, of Enumclaw, Wash., suffering bleeding in a hip joint after a slalom fall. It was not known how long she would be out of action.

Killy has 186 points in World Cup standings and the only way he could lose would be if Gerhard Nennig of Austria wins his next four races at Red Mountain meet here or at Heavenly Valley, Calif., April 6-7.

Killy's French ski team coaches dismissed Nennig's chances and named American skier Rick Chaffee, 23, as a threat in the slalom today, second day of the four-day Red Mountain international meet.

Coaches expected fewer disqualifications and falls in the men's event than there were in the women's slalom Thursday, won by Marielle Goitschel, a French ski team star since 1962.

Twenty women were disqualified and 12 others, including Canadian Nancy Greene of Rossland, defending world women's

Hoosiers Near First Swim Title

HANOVER, N.H. (AP) — Indiana's perennial bridesmaids don't want to wait any longer for the NCAA Swimming Championship. Judging from their impressive opening day performance, they may not have to.

"We've been working all year for this," said an elated Charlie Hickcox after smashing the American record for the second time in one day Thursday while leading a 1-2 Hoosier finish in the 200-yard individual medley.

"We really want to get this one for Doc," he said of Coach Jim "Doc" Counsilman, whose Indiana teams finished second three straight times from 1964 to 1966, and then wound up third last year.

Hickcox sliced five-tenths of a second off the U.S. record with a clocking of one minute, 53.9 seconds in his afternoon heats, then came back with a runaway victory in the finals in 1:52.6. Captain Bill Uley came in second, and the Hoosiers were on their way to a commanding first-day lead.

Indiana wound up with 129 points entering the second day of the three-day meet. Southern California was second with 77, followed by defending champion Stanford with 74 and Yale with 73.

Exhausted May Quits Olympics

DAYTON, Ohio (AP) — Don May, who led the Dayton Flyers to the National Invitation Tournament championship, has withdrawn from the Olympic basketball team tryouts, citing physical exhaustion.

"I didn't feel that I could perform at my best during the tryouts and consequently I thought it would be in the best interests of everyone concerned if I were to eliminate myself from this competition," the 6-foot-4 forward said.

Kingston 'Y' Teams Win and Lose in Troy

Fifty Club of Kingston was out to an early victory and topped by Cramers of Albany 100-88 and Kingston's Roadrunners topped Emily's Lunchette 96-71 in the quarter final round of the Troy YMCA basketball tournament last night.

Pete's Panthers of Kingston routed Team, Inc. of Amsterdam by the unbelievable margin of 156-37 in the first round game.

Wes Thompson and Mike Hoffman scored 39 points each for Pete's. Gary Flowers hit 22 and Gary Mathews and Steve Beverly 18 each. Other scorers: Mark Toney 6, Gene Ballou 5, Mark Stevens 9.

Jerry Cooke's hot hand was too much for the Kingston defense. Down 22-13 in the first period, Fifty Club pulled to within six, 59-53, at the end of the third, but that was as far as they could sustain the drive.

Don Komosa led Fifty Club with 22 tallies. Howie Mayfield added 18. Cooke was high for Cramer's with 25 points, and Mark Bigum added 22.

Jerry Barber's 33 points paced the Roadrunners to their victory. The Kingston team moved

Stock Car Carburation Rules Revised by ACC

NEW YORK (AP) — The Automobile Competition Committee of the United States approved a revision of the rule on stock car carburation Thursday, allowing use of two four-barrel carburetors on all engines currently approved for competition.

All approved engines may use two four-barrel or three two-barrel carburetors with a maximum throttle bore of one and 11-16 inches.

Cars utilizing one four barrel carburetor will be limited to a maximum throttle bore of one and three-fourths inches on log-type and box-type manifolds.

The action was taken at the regular meeting of the ACCUS board of directors following an appeal by the Chrysler Corporation. Chrysler had a one carburetor restriction on its hemispherical combustion chamber and stagger valve stock car engines. The restriction was imposed in 1964 when the engine was introduced. The rule revision becomes effective on April 15. The ACCUS also approved applications for the following 1969 International classification events:

Jan. 19—Riverside 500 at Riverside, Calif.; Feb. 1-2, 24 Hours of Daytona at Daytona Beach, Fla.; Feb. 23, Daytona 500 at Daytona Beach; March 21-22, the 12 hours of Sebring at Sebring, Fla.; May 30, Indianapolis 500 at Indianapolis, Ind.; Aug. 12-13, Watkins Glen Manufacturers' Championship at Watkins Glen, N.Y.; Oct. 5, United States Grand Prix at Watkins Glen.

Despite the understandable concern for Mike Ferraro's future as a baseball player, the early detection of his eye ailment may prove a blessing in the long run.

While medical authorities point out he will have to live with it for the rest of his life, it is controllable and medics are cautiously optimistic that it will not seriously interfere with his career.

It is much better for Mike's future to have discovered the ailment now rather than later when declining eyesight, perhaps completely unknown to him, would seriously jeopardize his career—or terminate it completely.

Now, with daily medication, his eyesight figures to be constant, perhaps even improved and that should make him a better ballplayer.

It is ironic that Ferraro was able to have his best spring training yet despite the insidious presence of the ailment. He was in the thick of the battle for third base with Bobby Cox when a routine eye examination changed the course of his life.

I am sure that all sports fans join with me in wishing Mike Ferraro a long and successful major league career, despite what happened on Wednesday.

SAM SNEAD'S ADVICE: Veteran Sam Snead, the sweetest 55-year-old swinger in the land has some sound advice for the over-40 golfer.

Snead sees no reason for your game to deteriorate because you reach middle age. He suggests (1) a little lighter club with a more flexible shaft, (2) make sure your irons light straight to the ground (3) use a softer golf ball of the 80 to 85 compression, (4) practice your chipping and putting, (5) inspect your chip shots from the down side of the intended line of flight in order to get the full view of the terrain and (6) learn to chip with one set club.

Sam uses the 6-iron as his principal chipping weapon. All this sounds pretty good to this better-than-55 duffer!

Pete's Panthers of Kingston routed Team, Inc. of Amsterdam by the unbelievable margin of 156-37 in the first round game.

Wes Thompson and Mike Hoffman scored 39 points each for Pete's. Gary Flowers hit 22 and Gary Mathews and Steve Beverly 18 each. Other scorers: Mark Toney 6, Gene Ballou 5, Mark Stevens 9.

Jerry Cooke's hot hand was too much for the Kingston defense. Down 22-13 in the first period, Fifty Club, pulled to within six, 59-53, at the end of the third, but that was as far as they could sustain the drive.

Don Komosa led Fifty Club with 22 tallies. Howie Mayfield added 18. Cooke was high for Cramer's with 25 points, and Mark Bigum added 22.

Stock Car Carburation Rules Revised by ACC

NEW YORK (AP) — The Automobile Competition Committee of the United States approved a revision of the rule on stock car carburation Thursday, allowing use of two four-barrel carburetors on all engines currently approved for competition.

All approved engines may use two four-barrel or three two-barrel carburetors with a maximum throttle bore of one and 11-16 inches.

Cars utilizing one four barrel carburetor will be limited to a maximum throttle bore of one and three-fourths inches on log-type and box-type manifolds. The action was taken at the regular meeting of the ACCUS board of directors following an appeal by the Chrysler Corporation.

Chrysler had a one carburetor restriction on its hemispherical combustion chamber and stagger valve stock car engines. The restriction was imposed in 1964 when the engine

1918—A DAY'S BAG OF TROUT BEFORE LIMIT WAS SET ON TAKE

Trout Fishing-No Holds Barred

Enough trout to fill several milk cans used to be the result of day's trout fishing before the state set a limit on the take. The photo above, representing just one day's take is solid evidence of the good old days.

This picture was taken 50 years ago in early May, 1918 by the late Guy Davenport at Blue Hole, a famed trout spot on the headwaters of the Rondout Creek near Peekamoose Mountain. Other fishermen (now deceased) on the expedition included William Krom, Edward Davenport and Carl W. Nordgren. Ernest LeFevre, director of the Kingston Trust Company, was also on hand.

The boys piled all of their gear into a Vim truck and headed for the Rondout. They came home with 75 fat trout, a good day's fishing in anybody's book.

The upper reaches of the Rondout Creek were also frequented by millionaires from Napanoch's Yama Farms resort. The late John Burroughs, West Park's world-renowned naturalist, conducted many of the socially prominent on nature walks along this upspoiled stream of the Catskills.

Among the more well-known were Henry Ford I, the automobile magnate; Harvey Firestone, tire manufacturer; Thomas Edison, electrical sportsman Teddy Roosevelt.

Ulster Takes Doers Over Watchers in Sports Plans

By CHRIS GEHMAN
(Freeman Sports Staff)

Kingston's new Ulster Academy is interested in more than just preparing students for college work. The Academy wants to develop sturdy individuals who can make honest contributions to the world.

Athletics will have their place at the academy, but the emphasis will be on participation, not watching. There will be no "star system" at the school which opens its doors for the first time in September.

The school is more interested in training its students in sports that they will be able to use later in life than teaching them to play basketball, baseball or football.

"The task of every student," says the Academy's catalogue, "is to exercise himself to the best of his ability so as to develop his native strength into mastery and his weakness into competence."

Preparing for Living
Headmaster Raymond A. Nelson wants to prepare his students for living. The school's athletic policy will be to involve every student in sports. "We want doers, declared Nelson, "not watchers."

Today, too many students rely on outside factors for their amusement. They wait around for someone else to turn on the television set, or watch someone else play a sport they can only watch. There is nothing wrong with watching sports events, but Ulster Academy would like its students to be athletes themselves.

The school's small size (projected enrollment is about 250) necessarily limits inter-school competition. But it will not stop the students from competing among themselves. In the fall, there will be tennis for both boys and girls, field hockey for girls, soccer and cross country for the boys. The winter season will see competition for both boys and girls in basketball, volleyball, skiing and skating. With the return of balmy spring weather, the students will resume tennis, as well as playing softball and possibly golf.

Headmaster Nelson said there would be days during the winter when the whole school would go skiing together at one of the local slopes. "We're small enough to allow that kind of flexibility," he said.

The Academy has made arrangements to use Forsyth Park for the spring and fall sports, and to use the municipal auditorium in the winter. Members of the faculty with appropriate backgrounds will be the coaches. It's a possibility that the faculty will include a professional ski instructor, a competent soccer coach, and riding coaches. Mr. Nelson himself has coached sports for many years.

Athletics have always been a part of liberal education because participation in athletics develop courage and resolution. The stress on athletics at the Ulster Academy will be on playing, not on watching, and that is as it should be. Too many people in the world today watch without making any effort at action themselves.

Sanders' '65 Takes Lead

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP)—If Doug Sanders doesn't win the Masters Golf Tournament in April, his next big goal will be the British Open in mid-July.

It's not that he isn't planning to press his one-stroke advantage over the field in today's second round of the Greater Jacksonville Open. But Sanders has won it before and he knows another prestige victory would establish him among the elite of the game.

"The British Open to me could excel the big American tournaments such as the Masters, U.S. Open and PGA," Sanders said. "I have business interests in the British Empire, and I figure the British Open would mean half a million dollars more to me than any of the three major tournaments in the United States."

Sanders headed the pack with a seven-under-par 65 into the second round of the $100,000 Greater Jacksonville Open.

He shot an easy eagle—two wood shots and a two-foot putt—and five birdies in Thursday's opening round.

Five challengers were one stroke behind him and 60 others broke par 72 on the 7,221-yard Deerwood Club course.

Sampson Knight Wins Feature
By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Sampson Knight came from fifth Thursday night and edged Frank T. Ace by a nose in the $25,000 Adios Spring Festival race at Yonkers Raceway, the highlight of the evenings harness racing action in New York State.

The 9-year-old, driven by William Myer, was clocked in 2:02 1-5, the aging pacer's best time for the mile.

Pocomoonshine, the favorite, was third, another nose back. Sampson Knight, a 14-1 shot, returned $30.60.

Ned, a 7-year-old gelding, won the $1,200 conditioned pace at Batavia Downs, defeating Asoz by a length in 2:07 3-5. Favored Aaron Chief was third. The winner returned $18.60.

Gene's Biggest Reaction Comes From Draft Views

By HARRY KELLY

MILWAUKEE, Wis. (AP) —

Why does Eugene J. McCarthy spend so much time campaigning for the presidency of the United States on college campuses?

The Minnesota senator has spoken at colleges from Maine to Wisconsin as he presses his challenge to President Johnson for the Democratic nomination. He has even spoken at high schools, where the only voters were the teachers.

Why does he do it? "In part, it was because I really wasn't being invited to many Democratic meetings—until quite recently," he said.

Invites More Numerous

Those invitations have become more numerous and more open since McCarthy captured 42 per cent of the vote in New Hampshire and dramatically revealed Johnson's vulnerability, but still he goes back to the colleges.

He put it this way to a crowd of students in Wisconsin: "I still come back to the campuses because I think this is the point at which the issue was raised really."

The issue is opposition to the Vietnam war, and without it Gene McCarthy simply would not be a serious contender for the presidency.

There are other practical reasons: The audience is lively and bright. They ask good questions. He can be fairly sure of a full house.

And, an aide noted, in speaking to young persons, McCarthy also is speaking to adults—the voters—through the newsmen that cover his every move.

"They make a pretty good forum," the aide said, "but he's talking to the adults too because you guys are there."

And of course many college students are old enough to vote and all of them are old enough to work in the campaign.

At the University of Wisconsin, where McCarthy drew his largest crowd of the campaign this week—more than 15,000 persons—the registrar said 19,500 of the 31,000 students are 21 or over, old enough to vote in the primary next week.

McCarthy, who came to Congress 20 years ago from a campus (he was a professor), also gets paid for some appearances. Members of Congress who don't have law offices or other sources of income sometimes find it necessary to supplement their salaries through lectures.

Almost two weeks ago, when McCarthy was coming off his surprising showing in New Hampshire—and finding Sen. Robert F. Kennedy as a new rival—the Minnesota senator traveled into Maine to give speeches at Bowdoin and the University of Maine. Both were free speeches, McCarthy explained they had been contracted before he decided to campaign for the presidential nomination. Also, he said, he needed the money.

McCarthy has faced little if any heckling on campus. At Beloit College a few days ago, a student told McCarthy after a speech that he really hadn't said anything.

McCarthy replied: "I can't quite agree that I haven't said anything. I've said everything that I cared to."

But McCarthy added that "perhaps I should make clear what I have been saying that we had to accept a coalition government in South Vietnam, but that would have..."

Wide Range

Students ask McCarthy a wide range of questions which usually bear most heavily on the war, racial troubles and the economy.

The senator gets the biggest reaction when he deals with questions about the draft.

He was asked at one university: "How do you feel about the situation of clergymen and others who suffer a change of their classification because of their position on the Vietnam war?"

Responded McCarthy: "This initially we try to deal with indirectly, saying the draft should not be used as a punitive device. I think the best immediate suggestion is that—since this is really a government of men, not of laws—would be the retirement of Gen. Hershey."

Much of the door-to-door canvassing, filling and cranking of duplicating machines is done by volunteers from the campuses.

McCarthy often tells adult audiences that when he started, "and seemingly with only support from students, 'I said I didn't want to lead a children's crusade, I found out you don't have to lead them. You just turn them loose.'"

Local VFW Post Seeks Members

The Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States, Post Number 1386, Kingston, New York is now in the final quarter of its 1968 membership drive. This year's drive is well on its way to another record.

The Post is contacting all known eligible veterans in the Kingston and surrounding areas in order to make this drive more successful than any in the history of the Post. Any veteran who has not been contacted and desires to become a member of this organization, may contact the Joyce-Schirlick Post at 552 Delaware Avenue for information and applications. Membership is now open to all veterans of the Vietnam conflict. Free memberships are given to all men serving in the Vietnam. Help is asked of the families of Vietnam veterans and servicemen. The Post is soliciting aid in getting the addresses and other information necessary to communicate with these men.

Said Post Commander Andrew Edge, "membership in VFW does many things. First, you are a member of the largest and fastest growing veterans' organization in the country. Secondly, you are giving our national Commander the backing needed when he goes before the Congress to fight for improved veterans' benefits. Thirdly, you are helping our Department (State) Commander when he goes to our state capitol on veterans' legislation."

"Our own county commander is being helped by a large membership when he is trying to gain local support of VFW policies. One of the present fights is a non-working observance of Memorial Day by every business establishment in Ulster County," Edge said.

"Last, but not least, your local VFW Post supports community projects that are known for their character building. The Post sponsors a Babe Ruth and a Little League baseball team. We need the support of all veterans for continued support of these and other community projects such as our sponsored boy scout and cub scout pack."

Again, we offer an open invitation to all qualified veterans to join our ranks, national, statewide and locally for the greater call to duty of the betterment and the constant improvement of our American dream, Life, Liberty and the Pursuit of Happiness," Edge concluded.

Gene's Biggest Reaction Comes From Draft Views

By HARRY KELLY
MILWAUKEE, Wis. (AP) —

Why does Eugene J. McCarthy spend so much time campaigning for the presidency of the United States on college campuses?

The Minnesota senator has spoken at colleges from Maine to Wisconsin as he presses his challenge to President Johnson for the Democratic nomination. He has even spoken at high schools, where the only voters were the teachers.

Why does he do it? "In part, it was because I really wasn't being invited to many Democratic meetings—until quite recently," he said.

Invites More Numerous

Those invitations have become more numerous and more open since McCarthy captured 42 per cent of the vote in New Hampshire and dramatically revealed Johnson's vulnerability, but still he goes back to the colleges.

He put it this way to a crowd of students in Wisconsin: "I still come back to the campuses because I think this is the point at which the issue was raised really."

The issue is opposition to the Vietnam war, and without it Gene McCarthy simply would not be a serious contender for the presidency.

There are other practical reasons: The audiences are lively and bright. They ask good questions. He can be fairly sure of a full house.

And, an aide noted, in speaking to young persons, McCarthy also is speaking to adults—the voters—through the newsmen that cover his every move.

"They make a pretty good forum," the aide said, "but he's talking to the adults too because you guys are there."

And of course many college students are old enough to vote and all of them are old enough to work in the campaign.

At the University of Wisconsin, where McCarthy drew his largest crowd of the campaign this week—more than 15,000 persons—the registrar said 19,500 of the 31,000 students are 21 or over, old enough to vote in the primary next week.

McCarthy, who came to Congress 20 years ago from a campus (he was a professor), also gets paid for some appearances. Members of Congress who don't have law offices or other sources of income sometimes find it necessary to supplement their salaries through lectures.

Almost two weeks ago, when McCarthy was coming off his surprising showing in New Hampshire—and finding Sen. Robert F. Kennedy a new rival—the Minnesota senator traveled into Maine to give speeches at Bowdoin and the University of Maine. Both were fee speeches. McCarthy explained they had been contracted before he decided to campaign for the presidential nomination. Also, he said, he needed the money.

McCarthy has faced little if any heckling on campus.

At Beloit College a few days ago, a student told McCarthy hadn't said anything.

McCarthy replied: "I can't quite agree that I haven't said anything. I've said everything that I cared to."

But McCarthy added that, "perhaps I should make clear what I have been saying that we had to accept a coalition government in South Vietnam, but that would have..."

Wide Range

Students ask McCarthy a wide range of questions which usually bear most heavily on the war, racial troubles and the economy.

The senator gets the biggest reaction when he deals with questions about the draft.

He was asked at one university: "How do you feel about the situation of clergymen and others who suffer a change of their classification because of their position on the Vietnam war?"

Responded McCarthy: "This initially we try to deal with indirectly, saying the draft should not be used as a punitive device..."

I think the best immediate suggestion is that—since this is really a government of men, not of laws—would be the retirement of Gen. Hershey."

This suggestion that Lewis B. Hershey be retired as Selective Service director always draws applause from college audiences.

Much of the door-to-door canvassing, filing and cranking of duplicating machines is done by volunteers from the campuses.

McCarthy often tells adult audiences that when he started, and seemingly with only support from students, "I said I didn't want to lead a children's crusade. I found out you don't have to lead them. You just turn them loose."

Local VFW Post Seeks Members

The Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States, Post Number 1386, Kingston, New York is now in the final quarter of its 1968 membership drive. This year's drive is well on its way to another record.

The Post is contacting all known eligible veterans in the Kingston and surrounding areas in order to make this drive more successful than any in the history of the Post. Any veteran who has not been contacted and desires to become a member of this organization, may contact the Joyce-Schrick Post at 552 Delaware Avenue for information and applications. Membership is now open to all veterans of the Vietnam conflict. Free memberships are given to all men serving in Vietnam. Help is asked of the families of Vietnam veterans and servicemen. The Post is soliciting aid in getting the addresses and other information necessary to communicate with these men.

Said Post Commander Andrew Edge, "membership in VFW does many things. First, you are a member of the largest and fastest growing veterans' organization in the country. Secondly, you are giving our national Commander the backing needed when he goes before the Congress to fight for improved veterans' benefits. Thirdly, you are helping our Department (State) Commander when he goes to our state capitol on veterans' legislation."

"Our own county commander is being helped by a large membership when he is trying to gain local support of VFW policies. One of the present fights is a non-working observance of Memorial Day by every business establishment in Ulster County," Edge said.

"Last, but not least, your local VFW Post supports community projects that are known for their character building. The Post sponsors a Babe Ruth and a Little League baseball team. We need the support of all veterans for continued support of these and other community projects such as our sponsored boy scout and cub scout pack."

Again, we offer an open invitation to all qualified veterans to join our ranks, national, statewide and locally for the greater call to duty of the betterment and the constant improvement of our American dream, Life, Liberty and the Pursuit of Happiness," Edge concluded.

Dear Abby

'Closed Mouth' Policy

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN
(© 1968 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd., Inc.)

DEAR ABBY: The fellow I am going to marry hates my best girl friend. I won't go into details, but it is all my fault, because I told him something about her past that she told me in confidence. I am sorry I told him now, but I never thought he would hold it against her and make such a big deal out of it. This girl is the best friend I ever had, Abby, and I wanted her to be my maid of honor, but now my fiancé says he doesn't even want her at our wedding. I am just sick over this. Worse yet, he says he doesn't want her in our home after we're married.

What am I supposed to do? I don't choose his friends. My fiancé says if I loved him, I'd listen to him, and end my friendship with this girl. I say, if he loved me, he wouldn't ask me to. I love them both and I want him to forgive and forget. Who's right and how would you handle it?

DEAR ABBY: My husband is from Pakistan and I am from Sweden. We have been happily married for three years and are both in our late twenties. I am employed as a secretary, and am helping my husband complete his education. We intend to make the United States our home.

Our problem: we plan to go to Pakistan next year to visit my husband's family. His father is very well educated and speaks fluent English, but he wrote to us several months ago insisting that I learn Hindi! My husband wrote to his father telling him that I did not request that HE learn Swedish, and there is no reason for ME to learn Hindi! My father-in-law wrote back saying that I should indeed learn the language of my husband's people, and if I could learn to speak five languages, (which I do) it would not be too difficult for me to learn a sixth! He informed us that Hindi study manuals were being sent to me.

Abby, a Far Eastern language is entirely different from a Germanic or Latin language, and I have neither the time nor the desire to learn Hindi.

Now I don't even feel like going to Pakistan, but I hate to disappoint my husband. Have you any suggestions?

WEARY: DEAR WEARY: Have your husband teach you a few conversational phrases in Hindi. ("Hello, good-by, I am pleased to meet you," and "Sorry I do not speak your language very well." Keep a Swedish smile on your face and listen a lot.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "LOOK-ING": You meet respectable people where respectable people gather. If you want to catch mountain trout, don't go fishing in a herring barrel.

Everybody has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply write to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Cal., 90069 and enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

For Abby's booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding," send $1.00 to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Cal., 90069.

IN THE MIDDLE: DEAR IN: If your fiancé asks you to make a choice between your girl friend and him, that's a decision only you can make. I think his unforgiving and holier-than-thou attitude is less than admirable, but then I don't know what the girl did to provoke it. I hope you've learned a lesson. No fish ever got caught keeping his mouth shut.

DEAR ABBY: I am a single woman, 41, going with a man of 58. He is a widower with three grown children. He's very attractive and represents the kind of security a woman my age rarely finds. He was happily married for 30 years and now he wants to marry me.

The trouble is my mother. We have lived together since Dad died 12 years ago, and ever since I told her I want to marry this man she has cried and carried on like you wouldn't believe. She says he is too old for me and it will never work out. I told her she could live with us, but she refuses to move to the city where we would live. (She and I presently live in a suburb.)

When her friends try to tell her that she should be happy that I'll have someone to look after me when she's gone, she says HE is only 12 years younger than SHE is, and he won't last that much longer. Abby, I could be so happy with this man if I weren't for mother. What shall I do?

TORN: DEAR TORN: Marry the man. And ask him if he has a friend for your mother.

Duplicate bridge rewards skill more than rubber bridge and the team-of-four match based on International Match Point or IMP scoring is the most skillful form of duplicate, but even in this game there is a tremendous luck factor.

Today's hand decided a recent IMP match when one North-South pair bid six spades and the other stopped at game.

The luck factor is represented by the queen of clubs. Move it to the East hand in place of one of the small clubs and the slam bidders would have lost the match. The swing involved in the location of this club queen was 750 points each way or a total of 1,500. Translated it meant 26 IMPs total.

The hand caused considerable argument. The winning team claimed that the slam contract

Duplicate bridge rewards skill more than rubber bridge and the team-of-four match based on International Match Point or IMP scoring is the most skillful form of duplicate, but even in this game there is a tremendous luck factor. Today's hand decided a recent IMP match when one North-South pair bid six spades and the other stopped at game.

The luck factor is represented by the queen of clubs. Move it to the East hand in place of one of the small clubs and the slam bidders would have lost the match. The swing involved was 750 points each way or a total of 1,500. Translated it meant 26 IMPs total.

The hand caused considerable argument. The winning team claimed that the slam contract

After stopping the fight between her two small sons, the attractive mother had to spend over an hour in an attempt to placate them. Hoping to placate his angry girl friend the young man appeared at her door with an armful of red roses. The three sailors, realizing they had upset their waiter by some ridiculous remark, decided to leave a large tip, hoping this gesture would placate him.

Earthlings Tough on Kirk

By CYNTHIA LOWRY
AP Television-Radio Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Captain Kirk, the brave imperturbable commander of the space ship Enterprise, has some pretty hair-raising experiences on alien planets every week in "Star Trek."

But never, on any distant star visited by the ship and its crew during two years, going on three, has Captain Kirk been in danger of having his turtle-neck uniform torn off by welcoming natives.

Just Ripped Seams

That, however, was the experience of William Shatner, the former Shakespearean and Broadway actor who plays the lead in the series, when he tried to leave NBC's Manhattan headquarters earlier this week. Shatner, more nervous when confronted with eager earthlings than with the worst monsters dreamed up by a Hollywood studio special effects department, managed to escape with nothing more drastic than some ripped seams in his sports jacket.

The Enterprise and its galaxy-cruising crew have recently come through a rough ordeal. Several months ago, the word got around that NBC would cancel the science-fiction series at radio, said the star of the end of the season. NBC new-show.

Shatner and other members of the cast learned along the general public that NBC had decided to renew the series for next season—"I heard it on the radio," said the star of the end of the season. NBC new-show.

NBC, like the other two networks, is not likely to be swayed by viewer mail in making programming decisions. But "Star Trek" was special. Much of the mail came from doctors, scientists, teachers and other professional people, and was for the most part literate—and written on good stationery. And if there is anything a network wants almost as much as a high Nielsen rating it is the prestige of a show that appeals to the upper middle class and high brow audiences.

So Star Trek was saved and the production for next season's shows starts up in May.

QUELL BEDDING BLAZE — A city fireman wets down mattress which was involved in a fire Thursday afternoon in a second floor front bedroom of the home owned by Mrs. Catherine Kain, 185 Fair Street. Chief James M. Brett and Capt. Robert Schatzel were in command of firemen from Central and Wiltwyck Stations and Wicks Salvage Co. who extinguished the fire reported at 2:07 p. m. Records show that sparks caused when a sanding machine used by a workman hit nail tops ignited dust and sand scrapings on the floor. Flames burned a bed frame, mattress and bedding before firemen quelled the blaze with pressurized water. (Freeman photo by Kruh).

On Meeting Eve: A Slap for Joe

By CHARLES BERMPOHL

With the battle for delegates to Saturday's Democratic senatorial nominating convention some 24 hours away, Congressman Joseph Y. Resnick is preparing for a primary fight while at the same time smarting from a slap in the face from Dutchess County Democrats.

The Ellenville Democrat faces stiff opposition from two other candidates looking for what some consider the unenviable position of facing Republican Senator Jacob K. Javits in the fall.

Javits was unanimously endorsed by the Republican State Committee in Albany on Wednesday. The state's most popular vote-collector is seeking a third term as senator.

Resnick's upstate coordinator John Logan says he believes the congressman will get "at least 25 per cent" of the (convention) tally, and that he may collect as much as 40 per cent of the delegate's votes.

Also looking for the senatorial nod is Congressman Otis Pike of Riverhead and reform Democrat Paul O'Dwyer of Manhattan.

Manhattan Borough President Percy Sutton has indicated he will withdraw from the running.

The Dutchess County blow to Resnick's chances came in the form of "arm twisting" charges by County Chairman George Whalen. The second term congressman was also cited for his "hawkish" views on the Vietnam War by Whalen and influential state committeeman Albert L. Hecht of Poughkeepsie.

Whalen, seeking the state senate nomination to oppose Republican Sen. Jay P. Rolison Jr., declared that Resnick threatened him with the loss of his chairmanship.

"He said that if I did not support him (for the senate nomination) I'd better prepare myself for political retirement," Whalen said.

The Dutchess County Democratic leader claimed Resnick said "he would spend all kinds of money" to insure Whalen's defeat.

"I spent a night thinking about it," Whalen said, before he sent a letter to the congressman declaring "under no circumstances would I support you for the senate."

The Dutchess chairman asserted that "ordinarily I would support someone from this area" but he professed that the other part of his reason for not backing Resnick rested with the congressman's support of the Johnson administration's handling of the Vietnam war.

"(Resnick once claimed) that the only people opposed to the war were young men who wanted to avoid their duty and mothers who didn't want to see their 'darling boys' go off to war. He also claimed that the American people were prepared to march into North Vietnam, Laos, Cambodia, and God knows where else."

"I cannot support that stand," Whalen said, adding, "I will not be bullied."

Medicaid Changes Effective on Monday

The new state law which generally reduces Medicaid income eligibility levels by 11 per cent has changed household exemption schedules which become effective April 1.

For example, under the new household exemption schedule effective Monday, a family of four with a net income of $5,300 or $441 per month or less would be eligible for Medicaid benefits. However, they must also meet the cash resources requirements.

A family of four to be eligible must not have insurance with a cash surrender value of more than $4,000, or savings and other liquid assets of more than $2,650, or 50 per cent of the income exemption listed.

This same family of four may not have a total of insurance and liquid assets as described above in the aggregate of $5,650 to be eligible for Medicaid benefits.

Net income described in the schedule is total income less income taxes and the cost of health insurance premiums.

JOSEPH FITZSIMMONS

However, there are certain exemptions, according to County Welfare Commissioner Joseph Fitzsimmons. Under the new law those in the 21 to 64 age bracket are not eligible for benefits unless disabled or having catastrophic illness and are beyond the ability to pay. Exemptions will also be made for families with a large number of dependent infants.

Part of the new law governing Medicaid benefits passed by the State Legislature unanimously and now awaiting the Governor's signature, will eliminate the 20 per cent deductible feature to comply with federal standards. The Federal Government says the 20 per cent deductible feature must apply to all age groups.

The measure received final legislative passage in the Assembly Thursday by a vote of 107-13.

If the co-insurance provision is not amended by April 1, federal funds estimated at $252 million would be withheld from the state Medicaid program.

Elimination of the deductible provision however will add $3.5 million to the cost of Medicaid despite the $300 million cut reducing benefits effective April 1. Governor Nelson A. Rockefeller signed the cutback bill on March 12. It is estimated that 1.5 million possible recipients will be eliminated from the Medicaid program under the new law.

In connection with the changes the County Department of Social Services issued a notice this week that effective April 1, the green colored pasted medical identification card issued by the department for medical assistance for needy persons will be invalid and void due to the changes in the program.

The department announced it will not be responsible for charges for medical service rendered holders of the green cards after March 31.

Effective April 1, those persons eligible for benefits under the medical assistance for needy persons program in Ulster County in accordance with the state Social Service law shall be issued a yellow colored pasted medical identification card.

Tax — Spend Cut Nearing Ballot

By JOE HALL

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate heads toward a final vote on a three-point taxes and spending-cut bill after rejecting a section to freeze federal public works projects.

It also reversed itself Thursday and voted to go along with the Treasury Department's ruling to end tax exemptions on industrial development bonds, effective Jan. 1.

After five days of debate, the Senate was due to vote today on the over-all bill, which would extend auto and telephone excise taxes at current rates, apply a 10 per cent surcharge to income taxes and cut federal spending by about $6 billion.

Sen. John J. Williams, R-Del., who co-sponsored the surcharge-spending cut amendment, said Democrats have demonstrated they aren't serious about spending reductions which affect public works projects back home.

He told a newsman this is making some Republicans reconsider whether they will support the surcharge proposal, which President Johnson wants. The Senate voted 42 to 37 to eliminate from the package bill the freeze on public works projects.

Supporting the move were 38 Democrats and 4 Republicans; opposed were 12 Democrats and 25 Republicans.

QUELL BEDDING BLAZE — A city fireman wets down mattress which was involved in a fire Thursday afternoon in a second floor bedroom of the home owned by Mrs. Catherine Kain, 185 Fair Street. Chief James M. Brett and Capt. Robert Schatzel were in command of firemen from Central and Wiltwyck Stations and Wicks Salvage Co. who extinguished the fire reported at 2:07 p. m. Records show that sparks caused when a sanding machine used by a workman hit nail tops ignited dust and sand scrapings on the floor. Flames burned a bed frame, mattress and bedding before firemen quelled the blaze with pressurized water. (Freeman photo by Kruh).

On Meeting Eve: A Slap for Joe

By CHARLES BERMFOHL

With the battle for delegates to Saturday's Democratic senatorial nominating convention some 24 hours away, Congressman Joseph Y. Resnick is preparing for a primary fight while at the same time smarting from a slap in the face from Dutchess County Democrats.

The Ellenville Democrat faces stiff opposition from two other candidates looking for what some consider the unenviable position of facing Republican Senator Jacob K. Javits in the fall.

Javits was unanimously endorsed by the Republican State Committee in Albany on Wednesday. The state's most popular vote-collector is seeking a third term as senator.

Resnick's upstate coordinator John Logan says he believes the congressman will get "at least 25 per cent" of the (convention) tally, and that he may collect as much as 40 per cent of the delegate's votes.

Also looking for the senatorial nod is Congressman Otis Pike of Riverhead and reform Democrat Paul O'Dwyer of Manhattan.

Manhattan Borough President Percy Sutton has indicated he will withdraw from the running.

The Dutchess County blow to Resnick's chances came in the form of "arm twisting" charges by County Chairman George Whalen. The second term congressman was also cited for his "hawkish" views on the Vietnam War by Whalen and influential state committeeman Albert L. Hecht of Poughkeepsie.

Whalen, seeking the state senate nomination to oppose Republican Sen. Jay P. Rolison Jr., declared that Resnick threatened him with the loss of his chairmanship.

"He said that if I did not support him (for the senate nomination) I'd better prepare myself for political retirement," Whalen said.

The Dutchess County Democratic leader claimed Resnick said "he would spend all kinds of money" to insure Whalen's defeat.

"I spent a night thinking about it," Whalen said, before he sent a letter to the congressman declaring "under no circumstances would I support you for the senate."

The Dutchess chairman asserted that "ordinarily I would support someone from this area" but he professed that the other part of his reason for not backing Resnick rested with the congressman's support of the Johnson administration's handling of the Vietnam war.

"(Resnick once claimed) that the only people opposed to the war were young men who wanted to avoid their duty and mothers who didn't want to see their 'darling boys' go off to war. He also claimed that the American people were prepared to march into North Vietnam, Laos, Cambodia, and God knows where else."

"I cannot support that stand," Whalen said, adding, "I will not be bullied."

Medicaid Changes Effective on Monday

The new state law which generally reduces Medicaid income eligibility levels by 11 per cent has changed household exemption schedules which become effective April 1.

For example, under the new household exemption schedule effective Monday, a family of four with a net income of $5,300 or $441 per month or less would be eligible for Medicaid benefits. However, they must also meet the cash resources requirements.

A family of four to be eligible must not have insurance with a cash surrender value of more than $4,000, or savings and other liquid assets of more than $2,650, or 50 per cent of the income exemption listed.

This same family of four may not have a total of insurance and liquid assets as described above in the aggregate of $6,650 to be eligible for Medicaid benefits.

Net income described in the schedule is total income less income taxes and the cost of health insurance premiums.

JOSEPH FITZSIMMONS

However, there are certain exemptions, according to County Welfare Commissioner — Joseph Fitzsimmons. Under the new law those in the 21 to 64 age bracket are not eligible for benefits unless disabled or having catastrophic illness and are beyond the ability to pay. Exemptions will also be made for families with a large number of dependent infants.

Part of the new law governing Medicaid benefits passed by the State Legislature unanimously and now awaiting the Governor's signature, will eliminate the 20 per cent deductible feature to comply with federal standards. The Federal Government says the 20 per cent deductible feature must apply to all age groups.

The measure received final legislative passage in the Assembly Thursday by a vote of 707-13.

If the co-insurance provision is not amended by April 1, federal funds estimated at $252 million would be withheld from the state Medicaid program.

Elimination of the deductible provision however will add $3.5 million to the cost of Medicaid despite the $300 million cut reducing benefits effective April 1. Governor Nelson A. Rockefeller signed the cutback bill on March 12. It is estimated that 1.5 million possible recipients will be eliminated from the Medicaid program under the new law.

In connection with the changes the County Department of Social Services issued a notice this week that effective April 1, the green colored pasteboard medical identification card issued by the department for medical assistance for needy persons will be invalid and void due to the changes in the program. The department announced it will not be responsible for charges for medical service rendered holders of the green cards after March 31.

Effective April 1, those persons eligible for benefits under the medical assistance for needy persons program in Ulster County in accordance with the state Social Service law shall be issued a yellow colored pasteboard medical identification card.

Tax — Spend Cut Nearing Ballot

By JOE HALL

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate heads toward a final vote on a three-point taxes and spending-cut bill after rejecting a section to freeze federal public works projects.

It also reversed itself Thursday and voted to go along with the Treasury Department's ruling to end tax exemptions on industrial development bonds, effective Jan. 1.

After five days of debate, the Senate was due to vote today on the over-all bill, which would extend auto and telephone excise taxes at current rates, apply a 10 per cent surcharge to income taxes and cut federal spending by about $6 billion.

Sen. John J. Williams, R-Del., who co-sponsored the surcharge-spending cut amendment, said Democrats have demonstrated they aren't serious about spending reductions which affect public works projects back home.

He told a newsman this is making some Republicans reconsider whether they will support the surcharge proposal, which President Johnson wants.

The Senate voted 42 to 37 to eliminate from the package bill the freeze on public works projects.

Supporting the move were 38 Democrats and 4 Republicans; opposed were 12 Democrats and 25 Republicans.
